Much Talk, Little Done
Hitler's First Year
Victor H. Hanson Wonders
Evil Is Good, Gone Wrong
—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MR. MORGENTHAU, Secretary of the Treasury, apparently agreeing with Carlyle that "the more men talk the more likely they are to do nothing," tells Washington correspondents frankly that he does not mean to take them into his confidence concerning the President's plans for currency "stabilization," any discussions with Great Britain on that subject, etc.

The country gathers in a vague way that this country has set up a "stabilization fund" of two thousand million dollars, which will be used to buy or sell currency, according as our national wisdom may dictate, i put our dollar up or down, or keep it steady, as we choose. Half a dozen experts will be consulted, but not one will know whose advice has been taken; only the President and Mr. Morgenthau will know. Apparently there will be discussions with Great Britain and an agreement if possible, for a currency war with Great Britain, says Mr. Morgenthau, would be expensive for both countries.

The public, blissfully ignorant, can only hope that our "conversations" with England about money will not turn out as did our conversations about warships at the Washington conference. Then the United States junked new battleships, some half finished, and England junked blueprints.

The British are able "conversers."

Berlin yesterday celebrated the first anniversary of Hitler's rise to power. His appearance, and that of other dictators, are among the results of war, turning back the clock of progress. The natural course was from tyranny to monarchy, from monarchy to a republic. War turns back to the days of tyrants.

All these newly-made absolute rulers, Mussolini, Kemal Pasha, Stalin, Hitler, have been reinforcibly stable, and have had overwhelming support from the people ruled by them. The final story is to be written later.

Hitler's administration claims as one year's "accomplishments" reduction of unemployed from six to four millions, destruction of all political parties except the Nazis, withdrawal from all connection with the League of Nations, abolition of labor unions, legislation for sterilization of the unfit, and licensing journalists, and, finally, "elimination of Jews from many branches of private life and from all public offices."

That last "accomplishment" Germany will regret later. Before the big war began the Kaiser had eliminated Jews from all diplomatic posts, and his good "Nordic" diplomats gave him information and prophecy about 100 per cent wrong. Any one of a hundred intelligent German Jews could have told him that Italy would not stick to the alliance with him and Austria, that England would not see Belgium invaded and France conquered without entering the fight, and that the ramshackle Hapsburgs would not be worth their salt in a real war.

Victor H. Hanson, owner of The News and Age-Herald, of Birmingham, Ala., traveling up and down in the country with his friend, Ernine Ramsay, coal and iron man, declares that conditions are improving, rapidly. He does not prophesy as to what they will do later, but everything is better now, including coal and iron, on which Birmingham depends largely.

Mr. Hanson, one of the really able newspaper men in the country, who spends his money principally in gifts to charitable and educational institutions in memory of his wife, believes in concentration. He bought up competing papers in Birmingham, which helped simplify his problem.

Mr. Hanson wonders why W. R. Hearst will not syndicate the American Weekly Magazine section, distributed with Hearst Sunday newspapers, and allow other Sunday papers to distribute it also.

Said Mr. Hanson last night to Col. Frank B. Shutts, owner of the Miami Herald: "Hearst's American Weekly has five million five hundred thousand circulation now. I should think he'd just as soon get ten million circulation by letting other newspaper publishers print it." He adds that he has talked to Mr. W. R. Hearst about that, and will talk to him about it again. To develop a newspaper magazine printed in colors, able to develop circulation, is no child's play.

Milk Price Due to Drop Friday

ROBART SEES CUT AS U. S. PACT ENDS

Cream to Be Two Jars for 25 Cents; Saving for Farmer Looms

A substantial reduction in the price of cream and a "drop" in the price of milk by Friday was forecast today by Ralph W. Robart, chairman of the division of necessaries of life.

Robart would not discuss actual prices, but from another source it was learned that the "substantial reduction" is expected to cut cream now costing from 17 to 20 cents, to two bottles for 25 cents.

The price of milk, now 11 and 12 cents will be "lower", but how much lower could not be learned.

FACT TO END

Robart's forecast is based on the assumption that the AAA marketing agreement, which expires tonight, will not be renewed today. This alone will save farmers $100,000 a year, he estimated.

The lower prices for the consumer will also benefit the farmer, Robart declared. A "guide," scheduling the prices at which the public should be able to buy milk and cream, will be published by Robart and an advisory committee in conference at the State House today.

Dispatches from Washington said that the present "milk license" for the Boston market remain in effect until superseded, even though the agreement expired.

SEES BIG SAVING

Robart explained that this meant only the license as it affected the farmers, and that it had no bearing on wholesalers or retailers.

The $100,000 a year saving to the farmers would be from discontinuance of the office of Frederick Snyder, New England director of the marketing agreement, Robart said. Snyder told a hearing in Washington that costs of this office are deducted from farmers' checks, he said.

Italy Acts to Rearm Germany

DRUMS OF WAR

United States moves to build its navy up to treaty limits, and plans 3000 war planes.

Japan pushes 1934 budget providing for bigger navy. Threats to ignore treaty ban grows.

Rome, Jan. 31 (AP)—Italy came out in favor of the rearmament of Germany as the only practical solution of the armaments questions in an official memorandum issued today.

This rearmament, under the Italian plan, would be based on status quo for other powers on the principle aspects of their armaments.

The following limitations, however, would be applied:

Abolition of chemical warfare.

Prohibition of bombardment of civil populations.

Limitation at present levels of military expense, not bound by treaties in force.

Limitation to its present size of terrestrial equipment of these powers.

"Public opinion of the world is convinced that the capital and practical question is no longer to impede German rearmament," the memorandum said, "but to avoid that this should be effected outside the sphere of regulation and control."

Agreement on the four points could be reached quickly the memorandum holds, and could be made to remain in force until 1940.

Italy contends France would have ample security under such arrangements, even in the face of Germany's rearmament. The memorandum warned that the extreme limit of time available to break the disarmament deadlock has been reached.

The question of Germany's naval armaments should be left for the next naval conference, the memorandum stated.

3 KILLED IN NORWOOD BY ARSENIC

Enough Poison to Kill 19 Found In Victims After Rum Bout

What was reported a fortnight ago as the first instance of deaths from poison liquor since repeal, was revealed today as a cruel triple murder by arsenic.

District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing of Norfolk County declared that three men, poisoned during a drinking bout at the Christopher Sauer farm in North st., Walpole, January 21, had died from the deadly arsenic, not from wood alcohol.

THIRD ARREST LOOMS

Two persons are held in bail for selling the liquor, and further charges will be placed against Emilio Deveri, he said.

He forecast a third arrest—indicating that this person would be charged with administering the arsenic. An inquest will be held at Dedham court, probably tomorrow.

At the same time police were questioning a number of persons and a search was being made of the Sauer farmhouse and other buildings.

State Detective Lieut. Michael Fleming was questioning Mrs. Helen Sauer, 38, who lives at the farm. She has already told her story of the drinking party, but police seek other information.

ENOUGH TO KILL SCORE

Two of a number of bottles of liquor seized by police revealed potent doses of arsenic, chemists found.

One fluid ounce of liquor from one bottle had enough arsenic in it to kill thirteen persons, Dewing said. An ounce from another had lethal dose for six.

The victims were: Peter Rasvat-

Gilboy's story was corroborated by four men who were in the filling station when the shooting occurred nearly two hours after Patrolman Stanley had completed his tour of duty in South Boston.

The policeman told his superiors that he was in Scollay sq., intending to take a car home when he saw Gilboy drive by on a truck and chased him.

TOKIO PEER DECLARES RUPTURE WITH U. S. THREATENS

WARNS AGAINST PROGRAM FOR BIG NAVY

Jap Auxiliary Ships Will Lead America in '36, Osumi Says

Tokio, Jan. 31—The minister of the navy told the lower House of the Diet today that new auxiliary vessels of the Japanese navy would outrank those of the United States at the end of 1936, and a member of the House of Peers declared that it navy men had their way relations between the two nations would be ruptured.

Admiral Mineo Osumi, the head of the navy in history, offered statistics to show how the two navies would compare when the present naval treaty expired.

The suggestion of the possibility of a rupture was made by Kenichiri Yoshizawa, former foreign minister, during question time in the House of Peers.

RUPTURE INEVITABLE.

He told his audience that if the Japanese and American navies were to dictate the programs with which their respective governments enter the Naval conference scheduled for 1935, "A rupture would be inevitable leading. If the pessimistic view is accepted, to intensified naval competition —even if war is averted."

"The premier and foreign minister," Yoshizawa said, "have expressed the opinion that the tense situation prevailing can be smoothed out by diplomatic routes.

"I am of the opposite opinion. I understand Navy Minister Osumi will demand a higher naval ration. I am dissatisfied with the policy he will maintain but his attitude is clear to us.

"If we are not satisfied with the present 5-5-3 ratio, the conference will break up and lead to a shipbuilding race, deepening suspicion abroad and causing tension in our relations with the United States and England.

"If Osumi thus anticipates the results of the conference there is no use in our participating. We might just as well ignore the demands of foreign opinion."

Kokl Hirato, foreign minister, who was present, expressed a general but vague concurrence with Yoshizawa's views.

GIVES VIEWS IN WRITING

The admiral's statement was presented in writing in response to persistent questioning by representatives on the relations sea power of Japan and America.

The admiral did not mention the navy of Great Britain or of any other power, but confined himself to a comparison of the Japanese and United States navies at the end of 1936 when the present naval treaties expire.

The figures assumed the completion of the present Japanese naval program for which appropriations are included in the 1934-1935 budget, now up for discussion by the Diet, as well as the United States program as approved by the United States Congress, exclusive of the Vinson bill.

The bill referred to is that offered by Chairman Vinson of the naval committee which was passed yesterday by the House of Representatives, providing for a program of naval replacements to cost $475,000,000 to $570,000,000. By this bill 65 destroyers, 30 submarines and one airplane carrier would be constructed over a five-year period.

Osumi's statement climaxed several days of debate in the lower House of the diet on Japan's naval policy. Previously the Naval minister had reiterated Japan's determination to demand increased ratios at the next conference of naval powers although he declined to indicate the extent of the Japanese demands.

DECLINES TREATY STAND

He likewise declined to state whether Japan would denounce the Washington Naval treaty prior to December 31, 1934, in accordance with the treaty's provisions.

Instead, he told his questioners:

"We have almost a year to decide that point which the government is studying carefully."

Meanwhile, it was learned the army is allotting the sum of 120,000,000 yen to independent manufacturers of munitions, war materials and airplane parts, ignoring the capitalistic monopoly.

By spreading its expenditures, the army hopes to relieve the economic plight of small manufacturers. Four thousand young men will shortly be employed in arsenals, it was said.

Corps area commanders and arsenal commanders will supervise the manufacture, which is an important factor in military control of the key industries.

Boston Aide Says Daniell Had Bomb Before Blast

New York, Jan. 31 (AP)—A witness testified today that he saw a tear gas bomb in the possession of Eugene S. Daniel, young Boston lawyer and Presidential aspirant, some weeks before bombs gassed brokers and traders out of the Stock Exchange last August.

E. S. Daniel

The Witness, John G. Williams, who said he is a reporter and publicity man living at 21 Hemenway st., Boston, testified at thetrial of Daniell on charges of assault in the gassing of the exchange.

About a month and a half before Williams said, Daniell showed him a bomb. It was described as similar to the ones used in the exchange incident. Previously, he said, he had given Daniell in the National Independent Party's headquarters at 161 Milk st., Boston, the address of a Kentucky firm which sold tear gas bombs. Daniell wrote to the company, the witness said, but the letter was returned.

The witness said he has known Daniell 10 or 11 years and attended Harvard with him. He said he had acted as publicity man for Daniell's National Independent party. Williams also said he had worked for the Boston Post.

Under cross-examination by defense counsel, he acknowledged that after the bombing he sold a story about it to the Boston Herald.

When the defense lawyer, Lorenzo C. Carlino, asked when he began to negotiate for the sale of the story, the prosecution objected.

"I'll connect this up," said Carlino. "Don't worry."

Williams testified that about the day of the gassing he received a letter in New York from Daniell saying:

"Am coming to New York and I want you to handle publicity. I promise something more spectacular than what you handled in Boston. I want you if possible to get a pass for me to the Stock, Curb or Grain Exchange. The publicity is not contingent on this, but would make it much easier. Let me know your plans."

WORK MORE, EARN MORE, SPEND MORE IN 1934

'Big Navy' Program Puts More on Jobs Here

The Boston Navy Yard is due for a boom of indefinite duration as a result of the action of the House today providing that alternate war vessels in each class be built in government yards.

Boston congressmen led the battle for the move and forced the adoption of the Thompson amendment to the navy yard bill dividing construction work between private and government yards.

At the same time, it was announced at the Boston yard that men on furlough are now being called back and that the peak will be reached by the middle of March, with 1890 workers on the payrolls.

Two new peace treaty destroyers, the Commodore McDonough and the Monaghan, costing $2,000,000 each, are now on the ways at the Boston yard and will be completed in another year. The personnel at present numbers 1650.

The amendment called for the construction of at least half of the new vessels in the naval expansion program in government yards. It was introduced by Rep. Thompson of Illinois and is similar to the famous Dallinger amendment of 1928.

The House then passed the navy bill with the Thompson amendment.

The government has $2,000,000,000 invested in its navy yards and they should be used to their fullest capacity, Rep. Healey of Somerville told the House, adding that he would have introduced an amendment to that effect had not Rep. Thompson don so.

"Other great powers construct their naval vessels and equipment in government plants," he said, "and we should do likewise, so that we may be assured that this work will be done by our own citizens."

"This work should be done by mechanics skilled and trained, who know how to do this work accurately and expertly, and under the supervision of our own officers skilled in naval construction."

The bitter controversy that developed at that time between the Boston and Quincy districts flared up again in the House. Rep. Wigglesworth of Quincy made a strenuous effort to prevent passage of the amendment but he was unable to obtain the floor for his protest.

Navy yards should be kept at work and well-equipped if for no other reason than to have them fit for war, Rep. Connery of Lynn asserted. He added that the President realizes the need of keeping up the standards of the navy yards.

RUSSIA SPEEDS DEBT PAYING

Washington, Jan. 31 (INS)—Soviet Russia has let this government know informally that it wants to hurry up and pay some money on its debt and damage claims to this country.

This was learned today, as State Department experts rushed ahead with the complicated task of working out details of payments and how the money should be distributed among American claimants.

Soviet Russia's eagerness to start paying its obligations to the United States was conveyed to the State Department by Alexander Troyanovsky, the Soviet's first ambassador to this country.

Outside the little republic of Finland, Soviet Russia is the only debtor nation that has expressed eagerness to meet its obligations to this country.

LYNN GIRL ENDS LIFE WITH GUN

Miss Audrey Chapman, a graduate of Lynn English High School last June, shot and killed herself in Dayton, O., according to despatches received in Boston today.

No reason was given in the despatches for the suicide of the girl, the daughter of Mrs. Charles Clark of Newhall st., Lynn, and Allen Chapman of Laconia, N. H.

According to her mother, the girl had intended to return to Boston next June and entering Lynn Hospital to begin training as a nurse. Last June, Miss Chapman attempted to enter the hospital after being graduated from high school but found she would require a year of special study.

In September she went to the home of an aunt, Mrs. Frank Riley, at Dayton, where the girl's body was found today, with a bullet hole in the head.

Mrs. Clark declared her daughter apparently was in good spirits when she wrote her last letter home only a few weeks ago.

HUNT 'PRIEST' AS FORGER

The state police today asked Worcester authorities to be on the lookout for a man garbed as a priest and with a pocket full of blank checks from the rectory of St. Patrick's Church, Chicopee Falls.

The police were notified after the check was returned by a Springfield bank.

Jack's father, Mayor J. Vaughan Baker of Newfield, N. J., wired Coffin that he had sent his 19-year-old son money for transportation back East.

U. S. AIR FLEET TO BE WORLD'S GREATEST

Congress Speeds Pact Limit Building of Ships and Planes

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Jan. 31 (INS)—A tremendous wave of sentiment was sweeping Congress today to build the American navy up to treaty limits, construct the greatest protective air fleet in the world and erect a legal barrier against further loans to defaulting debtor nations.

The speed with which Congress acted upon preparedness legislation literally shocked the "pacifist blocs." In a single day, the House passed the Vinson bill, authorizing construction of 102 new warships over a five-year period at a cost of $475,000,000 under NRA rates. While the House was acting, the Senate naval affairs committee approved a similar bill after a two hour hearing.

GREAT AIR PROGRAM

Both measures carried provisions, giving the Navy modern fighting air units. The program would permit construction of 1184 new fighting planes to join the 1000 already authorized for the Navy. The new planes would cost $85,000,000 over a five-year period. Then, the government would be authorized to keep its sea and sky fleets on a modern basis, replacing all obsolete equipment as time required.

ARMY PLANES ORDERED

A separate army air program was initiated in the House by Representative McSwain (D.) of South Carolina, chairman of the House military affairs committee. It called for construction of 3000 new army war planes, spread at a cost of about $120,000,000 over a five-year period. This would include a group of 1000 planes to be known as the "G. H. Air Force"—to be used as a first line of defense.

On top of this tremendous preparedness drive, Congress appeared ready to approve the Johnson resolution, outlawing loans to and securities of defaulting debtor governments. Senator Johnson (R) of California, was expected to reach an agreement with administration leaders for final adoption of the resolution within another 10 days.

Next Task for Congress Is Clean-up of Nation's Stock Exchanges, Says Child

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD
Noted author and American ambassador to Italy under two administrations

Washington, Jan. 31—Congress is aware that the next major move of the administration is control of stock exchanges.

The demand for radical change has accumulated on the President's desk and has been growing more powerful as the country realized that, however necessary the orderly buying and selling of securities may be, a large part of our troubles arose from speculation. Secretary Roper has prepared for the administration a report on the evil and regulation of exchanges, Congress now awaits new orders from the quarterdeck.

Aside from the minor abuses by which the customer has been shorn by brokers' thimblerigging, the major menaces of the security exchanges and markets as they have been run should now be understood by almost everyone.

MOUNTAIN OF FALSE VALUES

The whole fabric woven by yesterday's stock exchange systems, and their Pollyana publicity, and their traffic in badly sweetened corporation reports, led the whole country up a mountain of false values.

False values and high expectancy, beautifully colored by hired economists and high pressure sales of new issues, put us on a pinnacle from which the foot of sound credit kicked us into the cocked hat of depression. We woke to the present morning-after that followed, as always, super-exhilarations.

Undoubtedly, the President is thinking that before the crash came, money which might have been employed in creative endeavor was loaned and reloaned to gamblers and "pool artists." The roulette wheel became the country's merriest business and no one cared much whether the dice were loaded. What difference did it make that the big fellow took hunks of loot so long as you and I on this debauch got what he left after he had gulped down the top and the middle.

On we rode to ruin!

Then we saw the big fellows and then hangers on, financial and political, sell the U. S. short to hasten the toboggan slide.

REALITIES LOOM AT LAST

Now, we are beginning to see realities. Such a period of pumped values, distended by an orgy and delirium of fantastic expectancy, brought another evil—perhaps worse than any the administration believes. There grew up a fraud, not upon the gambling public, but upon the whole home-to-savings, investment public. This interests the administration still more.

What was this devastating delusion?

It was the irresistible movement to build in our bloated confidence double our capacity to consume. The urge was on the bankers who went outside of legitimate banking into super-salesmanship to make their profit, or "spread" on the sale of securities. Let the money be invested in unneeded plant! Let the condition be created where nationally, we can make double the number of steel rails our railroads can use and twice the number of shoes our

ROOSEVELT TO DEVALUE U. S. DOLLAR SOON

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Jan. 31 (INS)—President Roosevelt may act today to devalue the American dollar in terms of gold.

Every necessary power to reduce the gold content of the dollar was given him when he signed the gold bill enacted by Congress and made it law. It gives the federal government title to the $3,500,000,000 gold stocks of the Federal Reserve System.

When the President proclaims devaluation, he will give the dollar a value—on the basis of the old, or present ratio—of between 59 and 60 cents under the new gold law. He has called a conference of his closest financial advisers for this afternoon. At this meeting, if observers are right, he will decide upon the specific devaluation figure.

60 CENT DOLLAR SEEN

When the dollar is revalued you will still be able to take a dollar into a bank and get 100 pennies, 20 nickels, 10 dimes or four quarters or two halves for it.

The way the dollar is to be revalued is to alter the number of fine grains of gold in the dollar. The present rate is 23.22 grains. If the President revalues to a 60 cent dollar, he will merely proclaim that from now on the dollar shall contain 40 per cent less grains of gold than before.

As no one now has any gold legally no one will make any immediate profit or suffer any immediate loss in number of dollars they hold.

GOVERNMENT PROFITS

But the government will realize an immediate profit, as existing gold dollars will have a 40 per cent surplus of gold in. It now owns something more than 4000 million dollars in gold. Revaluing the dollar at 60 cents will give the government a profit from the changed value of gold of 2666 million dollars.

From this profit there will be set up a two billion dollar stabilization fund, which will be used to protect this country's currency against foreign exchange raids and any other adverse influences.

STATE'S WOMEN LEGISLATORS BACK STERILIZATION BILL

MRS. BRIGHAM TO ASK STUDY OF PROBLEM

Action Is Necessary to Halt Crime, They Declare

By PEGGY DOYLE

Massachusetts' three women Legislators today declared that the state must have a sterilization law to solve the problem of the feeble-minded and mental defectives.

All three women Legislators voted yesterday in favor of a sterilization bill which was, however, defeated.

As they explained their stand today to the Boston Evening American, it was revealed that Mrs. Emma E. Brigham, Representative from Springfield, will present a resolution at the present legislative session for a thorough study of the problem, which has been thrown into bold relief by Hitler's drastic action in Germany.

29 FAVOR BILL

Representative Brigham's two women colleagues, Representatives Mrs. Mary Livermore Barrows of Melrose and Mrs. Mollie A. Sweetser of Reading, also were among the 29 who voted for the measure.

The bill, introduced by Representative Harold E. Cole of Taunton, provided for sterilization of insane, feeble-minded and epileptic inmates of state and county institutions.

"While none of us considered the bill ideal, we believed it was necessary from an economic standpoint," said Mrs. Brigham.

"Massachusetts has from 50,000 to 60,000 mentally defective people, but only 5000 are in state institutions. Unless something is done the state will be unable to cope with the situation within a few years.

"Too few people understand the purpose of the bill, which is an excellent one. The bill is designed to prevent the pro-creation of feeble-minded babies.

"I am a graduate nurse and received my training in the McLean hospital in Waverley. During my studies I learned of cases of feeble-mindedness and other mental defects being passed up to the third and fourth generations."

Sterilization operations should be performed only after a board of trained psychiatrists had given each case intense study, Rep. Brigham declared.

The Cole bill was denounced by some legislators in violent terms

Mrs. Sweetser said:

"Although I do not approve of the present bill, I voted for it because I consider it a step in the right direction. Increasing feeble-mindedness is presenting a serious economic problem to the state and it is vital that the legislature thoughtfully consider the question of sterilization.

"Mr. Cole's bill, it seems to me, has not been carefully enough worked out. I feel that the two or three members suggested to compose the sterilization board is not sufficient. There should be at least twice that many all to be medical men, trained psychiatrists. There should be absolutely no political tampering in this connection.

"I understand Mrs. Brigham, probably the most thoroughly informed member of the House on this subject, plans to introduce a resolution urging a searching study of sterilization before the close of the present session. I believe that knowledge of the question will swing the vote to the affirmative at the coming session."

CALLS PROBLEM SERIOUS

Rep. Barrows said:

"It is my belief that until we have some law for the segregation of the feeble-minded and other mental defectives, sterilization is an imperative necessity. Of course, if we did have such a law we wouldn't have to consider sterilization.

"As it is, our ever-increasing mental defective population is becoming a serious economic problem as well as a positive insurance of continued crime. It is a needless and frightful expense for the state to take care of this alarmingly large group of mental unfits."

3 SOVIET SPACE FLIERS KILLED IN LANDING

Gondola Drops From Balloon After Two Explosions in Fog

By LINTON WELLS
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Moscow, Jan. 31 (INS)—Flung to the earth when the metal gondola of their stratosphere balloon became detached from the gas-bag, the three Soviet aeronauts who got set a new unofficial world's altitude record of 12.97 miles were instantly killed yesterday afternoon, it was officially announced today.

Paul Fedeseemko

The balloonists were Commander Paul Fedeseemko, Assistant Ilya Oususkin and Constructor Andrey Vasenko.

FAILED TO CHECK SPEED

While no official explanation was given as to the cause of the crash, International News Service learned reliably that it was due to inability of the aeronauts to check the speed of their descent.

They had thrown overboard virtually all ballast in an attempt to reach the maximum altitude and released gas for the descent. As the balloon came in contact with damp climatic conditions near the earth, the hydrogen in the gas bag contracted and accelerated the speed of the descent.

Although International News Service was informed of the disaster in a brief statement from civil aviation officials early in the day, formal announcement was deferred until the Communist Party Congress assembled here this afternoon.

At that time, M. Ulikedzie, of the government police bureau, appeared before the Congress and made the following perfunctory announcement of the tragedy which brought a sudden end to what was decided to be the greatest of all flights into the stratosphere.

"On Jan. 30, between 3:30 and 5 p. m., at the village of Potlisey-Ostrog eight kilometers south of the Kotoshkino station in the Insarovo district and the Mordovskaya region several hundred kilometers southeast of Moscow, the gondola broke away from the balloon and hit the earth.

"Under the shock, the balloon rose and disappeared.

PROBE IS STARTED

"Eye-witnesses report two explosions were heard at the time of the crash.

"In the gondola, three corpses were found, one of which was mutilated beyond recognition.

"All the scientific instruments and everything inside was smashed.

"A special commission of investigation has left Moscow for the scene of the catastrophe."

Not the last tragic aspect of the disaster was the fact that the balloonists had succeeded in reaching the unprecedented altitude of 20,600 meters or 12.79 miles, almost a mile higher than the official stratosphere record established by Lieut.-Comm. T. G. Settle of the United States Navy last fall.

They had carried on uninterrupted experiments of value to the study of meteorological conditions and the actions of the cosmic ray, reporting by wireless at frequent intervals in the early stages of their flight that the scientific aspects of the venture appeared destined for success.

GAY THRONGS SEND $15,000 TO GEORGIA

Birthday Parties for Roosevelt Given Hearty Support

Other Stories and Pictures, Page 6

Checkup today revealed that Boston will send more than $15,000 to President Roosevelt for his endowment of the Warm Springs Foundation for infantile paralysis sufferers from returns of the two President's Birthday Balls here.

Society and officialdom of city and state mingled gaily with persons from the humble walks of life in according honor to the nation's chief executive in the two great Boston balls. More than a dozen similar parties were held in suburban sections of the city in conjunction with the more than 6000 affairs held throughout the country.

An official estimate of the total attendance at all of the parties in Massachusetts was 49,000, who contributed a total of $35,000 for admission.

ALL EAGER TO AID FUND

Some 3000 persons thronged the Imperial ballroom at Hotel Statler while over 1000 were present at another birthday party, held at Hotel Bradford under the auspices of the Boston Central Labor Union.

The parties found hundreds of persons anxious to participate and show their gratitude to the President, on his 52d birthday, by contributing their part to his favorite benefaction.

Cities and towns outside Boston vied with this city in putting on similar affairs, all of which were reported well attended and successful. In Cambridge, Somerville, Medford, Melrose, Woburn, Everett and Wakefield, largely attended parties will help to swell the endowment fund.

In Lawrence, 25 men at the Federal transient service center pooled their meager resources to send a birthday message to the President at the White House. In the assembly hall at Camp Curtis Guild, Wakefield, 187 homeless men gathered for a festive celebration of the anniversary.

The birthday ball at Hotel Statler was one of the largest and most picturesque ever seen in the city. Elegant members of Boston society brushed elbows with persons who had a hard time digging up the necessary money to assure their attendance.

The grand march started some time after 10 p. m. and because of

DOCTORS FORCE STERILITY ON GIRL

Former Waif Tells Horror Experience to Detroit Board

Detroit, Jan. 31 (US)—Charges that doctors and nurses at University Hospital forcibly sterilized girl inmates of the Wayne County Training School are contained in affidavits introduced at a public hearing here.

One girl who said she is now going with a young man who wants to marry her declared that hospital attaches "held my hands, head and feet until I fell asleep" and then operated. She said she is now afraid to tell her fiance about it.

"OPERATION" FORCED

The girl had been abandoned by her parents after they were divorced and sent to the training school at the age of 14. She said attempts to sterilize her were made continually after she became 21. Her affidavit said:

"They told me all girls must be sterilized before leaving the school. Dr. Haskell told me how wonderful it was for a girl to be sterilized. He said 'I wouldn't let my own daughter get married unless she was sterilized.'

"I asked Dr. Haskell why he didn't have his own daughter sterilized and he said he would before permitting her to marry. I told him I wanted to marry and have children, and my father told them the same thing when he visited me one time and they tried to get him to sign the papers.

"Some time later Mrs. Sly came to me and said she was going to take me for a nice ride. I knew it was sterilization and refused to go. But Miss Fallon pushed me into the car and drove me to Ann Arbor."

3 COUNTS CHARGED

Three other affidavits accusing officials of the training school with using coercion and deception in sterilizing boy and girl inmates of the institution were introduced.

The hearing, before the county board of auditors, was demanded by Auditor Edward M. Williams, who declared sterilization was practiced on inmates "with less regard for human rights than in Hitlerite Germany."

Gloucester Salts Pay Debt to Their Dead 'Mother'

By ED MILLETT

Gloucester, Jan. 31—The men who go down to the sea in ships were repaying a debt of long-standing today—and with eyes that were suspiciously moist.

They were collecting funds so that Veronica could be given a burial befitting the "Mother of Sailors" and "Sweetheart of the Fishermen." Such were the lowly titles bestowed upon her.

In death, as in life, an aura of mystery surrounded Mrs. Veronica Breen. Before the 70-year-old benefactress of sea-going men was taken to City Hospital in an ambulance she placed a packet of papers in her bosom.

"No one will know anything about me when I'm gone," she said weakly.

And somewhere, somtime, the documents disappeared.

Veronica—that is the name by which she was known along the waterfront—was herself daughter of the sea, having been born on a fishing schooner crossing from Liverpool to Halifax. Her mother died a few hours after her birth.

She came to Gloucester 39 years ago and opened a fishermen's boarding house. It was a haven for seafarers who were broke or needed nursing. When "gobs" from Uncle Sam's men-of-war got into trouble she cleaned and mended their uniforms, treated their bruises, to save them from punishment at the hands of stern superiors.

Nineteen years ago she moved to Maine, but the call of Gloucester was strong and she returned 18 months ago—to become a washerwoman. The work was too strenuous. Pneumonia struck her low.

Yesterday she died. The packet of papers was missing. In its place was found a blank sheet of paper, an envelope and a stub of a pencil.

Veronica was married, but nothing is known concerning her husband. She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Joseph Pella, of Wilmot st., Portland, Me.

BRADFORD, ELY AID, LINKED TO NORFOLK EXPOSE

Hurley Probes Prison Furniture Deal as Governor's Secretary Explains He Paid; Auditor Lashes Gill

By JAMES J. SMITH

While Governor Ely basked under a tropical sun today, the investigation he ordered made at the Norfolk Prison Colony returned to roost over the door of his executive office, like Poe's croaking raven.

Details of a furniture transaction entered into with the prison administration by the Governor's assistant secretary, Robert B. Bradford, are in the possession of State Auditor Francis X. Hurley who was assigned by the governor to make the investigation and is now preparing his report.

Moreover, it was learned indisputably that Bradford, although not named, was the subject of Auditor Hurley's warning that he would brook no interference in the handling of the prison cleanup "by anyone connected with the state government, however important he may think he is or however close he may believe himself to be to anyone here in the State House or elsewhere."

BRADFORD SEES GILL

Between the time that Commissioner of Correction Frederick J. Dillon indicated he would discharge the colony superintendent, Howard R. Gill, and the time he made the less drastic move permitting Gill to withdraw until the Hurley report is made, Bradford had conferred with Dillon.

Dillon, also a former assistant secretary to Gov. Ely, is associated in the same private law office with Bradford.

Bradford denied, however, that he had interfered in any way with the prison investigation or interceded with Dillon in Gill's behalf.

Explaining the furniture transaction he said he met Gill at the prison two years ago for the first time and was shown the woodworking plant and that a few months later, when he was opening a law office with Dillon, he ordered some furniture from the colony.

One of the chairs collapsed under Johnny Murphy, the governor's 320-lb. messenger, and others started to come apart, Bradford said. He telephoned Gill and asked him to send a bill and told him about the chairs, later sending the chairs back to the prison for repairs.

Gill, he stated, said he couldn't send a bill because he wanted the prison to compete with outside business and no outside firm would expect payment until everything was satisfactory.

Last July or August, he said, Charles P. Howard, finance commission chairman, went to his office and said:

"Bob, there's something embarrassing at Norfolk. There are some woodworkers there who say the governor's secretary went down and had some furniture made and hasn't paid for it."

SAYS HE PAID BILL

Bradford said he explained about the chairs and that Howard was satisfied, and that he later called Gill and told him:

"See what a mess you got us into by not sending a bill."

He sent a check in payment for all but the chairs at once, Bradford said. The chairs, he said, have never been returned.

Whether Hurley intends to include his own version of the transaction in his report, he would not say. He would not discuss the matter.

Although the investigating auditor made clear in his blast directed at interference that Commissioner Dillon's actions affecting Gill and the colony are his own business, he is known to have been aroused because Dillon released the superintendent from the gag order issued by the governor himself.

For Gill's first statement after this release was a broadside directed at Hurley and his methods.

The entire situation, as a result of Dillon's arbitrational attitude toward Gill and Bradford's appearance in the picture, has become so tangled up that Gov. Ely's return from his West Indies cruise, scheduled for February 9, will probably see immediate executive action for a permanent change at Norfolk. Hurley hopes to have his report completed by that date.

Dillon on Saturday, when he saw the proof that the institutional records of certain convicts at the colony had been changed, exclaimed: "This is too much!"

HINTS AT FELONY

He indicated he would discharge Gill on Monday and that the only reason for delay was to give him opportunity to study the law and determine whether a felony had been compounded by changing the records.

Bradford was in communication with him Monday. The "axe party" was scheduled for Dillon's office in the State House at noon Monday, at which hour Gill arrived.

When Dillon finally put in an appearance, Gill went into his office accompanied by Prof. Sheldon Glueck, Harvard penologist.

The commissioner's attitude during the conference was greatly at variance with his attitude of Saturday. It's result was the temporary withdrawal of Gill, his release from the gag-rule and a public statement by Dillon that his action was no reflection on the superintendent and that he would request the governor to appoint a non-partisan committee of five to pass on Hurley's report.

Hurley is known to resent the non-partisan committee idea and to look upon it as a reflection upon him and an attempt to usurp the governor's executive powers.

Dillon's explanation of Dr. Glueck's presence during his conference with Gill was

"He came here to express the hope that Gill would be retained. Other people sent wires. He sat in because I wanted someone to be there to see I wasn't putting the slug on Gill."

Bradford walked in while Gill was reading his statement to the press and Gill jumped up, shouted "Why, hello Bob," and shook hands."

Amplifying his criticism of the "invisible government" which has come to the defense of Gill, Auditor Hurley today answered the charge that the appointment of Francis J. Lanagan, parole officer, as assistant superintendent at Norfolk is a recession to old penal methods. ...

HITS "UNFROCKED PASTOR"

"I am willing to take Lanagan, whom I never saw, against his predecessor an unfrocked clergyman," Hurley said. "I expect Mr. Gill and the invisible government backing him will add Lanagan's name to those of Hurley and Nawn. I only know that Lanagan's record in penal work goes back beyond the time his predecessor was unfrocked as a clergyman."

It was learned today for the first time that Hugh J. McColl, a veteran of three years' service at Norfolk, was the officer who wrote into the institutional records of two prisoners the confessions of attempted escape obliterated by Mark C. Roser, supervising house officer, and which Gill claims should never have been entered.

REPEAL SAVES $12,000,000

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP)—The annual supply bill for the state, justice, commerce and labor departments, showing savings of about $12,000,000 due to prohibition repeal but providing additional funds for investigation of kidnaping and other criminal activities, was reported today to the House by its appropriations committee.

For the four departments, a subcommittee approved $90,667,000 for the fiscal yea, beginning July 1, a reduction of $13,902, under current appropriations and $4,831,000 below budget estimates.

Byrd Supply Ship Arrives at Critical Moment

Aboard Admiral Byrd's Flagship, Little America, Jan. 31 (AP)—The Bear of Oakland, supply ship of the Byrd Antarctic expedition, arrived at the Bay of Whales last midnight (6 a.m. Eastern standard time today).

The vessel hove into sight at a critical time in the camp at Bay of Whales. Crumbling ice has endangered supplies, which are being landed and taken to the winter camp.

The Bear of Oakland sailed from Dunedin, New Zealand, two weeks ago. It carries a number of essential supplies for the expedition.

Meantime 44 marooned men of the expedition are struggling amid shifting mountains of ice to save the winter provisions deposited two miles from the bay's edge.

The Jacob Ruppert, after cruising and drifting since Saturday, put a shore party out in a boat. They crossed a minute crack scarcely wide enough to admit a knife blade. Twenty minutes later they returned and the crack had become a gap three feet across, but they leaped it and returned to the Ruppert.

WIND SUBSIDES, COLD BROKEN

After three of the coldest days of the winter, thermometer readings began a climb toward more comfortable levels at 8 o'clock this morning.

The mercury had reached 8 above at that hour, and from then on its climb was rapid, at 9 a. m. it was 11 above, by 10 it was 14. The forecaster said that this rise would continue through the day, with the lowest temperatures tonight between 20 and 25 above.

A storm, now centered over western Ontario, is moving this way rapidly and is expected to bring snow or rain tomorrow.

Middlesex county saw the lowest temperature readings of the three-day cold snap. It was 10 below in Lexington, 7 below in Bedford, 10 below in Carlisle, 5 below in Lincoln, 3 below in Concord and 2 below in Arlington.

The temperature at Montpelier, Vt., fell to Arctic levels with 46 degrees below zero reported.

For the first time in many years five miles of the Cape Cod Canal froze up, marooning 10 barges and towboats although steamers, with their superior power, managed to fight through the ice.

PRESIDENT SON DIVORCEE HURT

Philadelphia, Jan. 31 (AP)—Mrs. Elizabeth Donner Roosevelt is recuperating from injuries suffered in a fall from a horse last Sunday.

Members of Mrs. Roosevelt's family declined to say where the accident occurred.

MRS. HEARST IS FETE LEADER

Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 31 (AP)—Socially prominent of America wintering at this famous resort, tonight paused amid a dazzling affair at the exclusive Everglades Club to toast President Roosevelt on his 52nd birthday anniversary.

Calling for attention, in a setting lifted from the Bowery of the Gay Nineties, John Shepard, Jr., of Boston and Lenox, Mass., mayor of Palm Beach, invited "Democrats, Republicans and those who, in these strange times do not know what they are, to arise and drink the health of a man who is trying to do what is right and best for the people of our country."

The response was spontaneous and unanimous.

One room of this swanky, social center was a Bowery barroom, transplanted, even to the sawdust on the floors, from what once was known as "the world's most wicked mile." Social registerites romped as dance hall girls while their escorts stroked handlebar mustaches. Across one end stretched a battered bar. Tall bottles covered tiny tables, on which lay copies of The Police Gazette. On the piano were songhits of the period, "Your Daddy Did the Same Thing Fifty Years Ago." "I Just Can't Make My Eyes Behave" and "I'd Trust My Husband Anywhere But I Like to Stick Around."

Tommy Loughran and Primo Carnera shadow boxed and Arthur "Bugs" Baer ruled as master of ceremonies.

Mrs. William Randolph Hearst was entertainment chairman.

SECRET FUND OF BROWN BARED IN P. O. PROBE

Washington, Jan. 31 (INS)—Existence of a secret trust account set up by former Postmaster-General Walter F. Brown in a Toledo, Ohio, bank was revealed today before the Black Senate committee investigating ocean and air mail contracts.

Details were withheld temporarily after heated protest by Republican committee members against barring "confidential information."

Fireworks started when B. T. Batsch, vice president of the Toledo Trust Co., admitted Brown opened the trust account in October, 1929, month of the great stock market crash.

According to previous testimony, Brown then had securities in secret trading accounts aggregating more than $3,000,000.

Batsch told the committee the relations of trustee and trustor are "personal and confidential." He added:

"I have communicated with Brown and he is willing I reveal all details at an executive meeting of the committee.

"He is willing information be given publicity regarding any securities in the account insofar as these securities may be related in any way to ocean and air mail contracts."

Senator Black (D) of Alabama, chairman, demanded, "Who is the beneficiary of this trust fund?"

Senator Austin (R) of Vermont heatedly protested the question.

Postoffice Acts Like Speak

With stamp windows blocked with slotted cardboard windbreaks, the postoffice reminded Miss Anne Finn of Dorchester of what she had read of speakeasies in pre-repeal days, when she bought stamps of Joseph B. Kelley. Patrons unconsciously lowered their voices and started to ask for "Joe." (Boston American photo.)

'SPEAKY' SLOTS BACK IN P. O.

Pre-repeal patrons of speakeasies accustomed to peering through slots in doors while asking for "Joe," felt right at home today in the new postoffice building. Could it be that Uncle Sam was bootlegging stamps?

For in front of every stamp window at the Water st. wing of the structure on the first floor was a cardboard windbreak with a hole cut at eye-level. Subconsciously some customers lowered their voices as they asked for stamps; they could catch only a momentary glimpse of the man behind the scenes. And a spooky hand would push out the required stamps and change through another hole.

BIRTHDAY PARTY RECEIPTS NEAR $1,500,000

Washington, Jan. 31 (AP)—Across the greatest pile of greetings ever known to modern times, Franklin D. Roosevelt today looked back on what he adjudged the ultimate of happy birthdays.

For him there was mixed in both the memories of a rollicking private party and in his own words, the pleasure of a "tribute through me to the stricken ones of our great national family."

The great central hall on the White House second floor was the scene of the President's own gathering.

It was from this room that the President excused himself to address to the nation his thanks for more than 250,000 messages of "happy birthday" and for the national campaign to aid stricken children that he saw blossoming from the 6000 birthday balls throughout the country.

Into a microphone the President gave thanks for the contributions to the "gospel for the care and cure of crippled children in every part of this kindly land."

"I thank you but I lack the words to tell you," he said, "how deeply I appreciate what you have done. This is to me the happiest birthday I ever have known.

"Warm Springs, through the generous gifts which are being made to the foundation tonight, will be able to increase its usefulness nationally. The facilities are available, insofar as beds and funds permit, to the rich and to the poor."

Figures from 41 states and the District of Columbia gathered by the Associated Press and copyrighted showed that the "birthday party receipts probably will reach $1,500,000.

First figures showed 737,067 persons contributed a total of $839,568 at the several hundred celebrations reported.

Two other apllcants were rejected because their proposed places of business were either in close proximity to playgrounds or because licenses to care for the needs of that district had been issued, in the opinion of the board.

Problems of state and nation, economic and legislative, were forgotten in the desire of Massachusetts to express to President Roosevelt its gratitude for his efforts in the nation's behalf by contributing to his personal endeavor, the Warm Springs Foundation for paralysis sufferers. Party lines were erased when Mayor Mansfield, ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, and Lieutenant-Governor Gaspar Bacon, with their ladies formally opened the birthday ball at the Hotel Statler by leading the grand march. An unofficial envoy from the White House was Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr. Story on Page 3 room.

Medford Jobs Approved

Approval of $28,000 in new projects was received by Mayor Irwin of Medford, today, from CWA headquarters in Boston. The work will give 329 men employment.

MILLIONS OWED CITY OFFSETS BIG DEFICIT

The largest deficit ever piled up in the history of Boston—$13,425,000—was inherited by Mayor Mansfield from the Curley regime, it was revealed at City Hall today by Rupert Carven who is retiring as city auditor.

The deficit, however, is at least technically offset by $21,000,000 in 1932 and 1933 taxes that have not been collected. Just how much of this amount ever will be collected is, of course, problematical. It is, however, believed that collections may eventually be great enough to give the city an actual surplus instead of deficit.

Carven said that he was closing the city's books today for the fiscal year, ended Dec. 31 with all bills paid and with a balance of $75,000. Few communities as large as Boston, he pointed out, keep their books open for a whole month to pay bills that are late in reaching the city hall. Most of them, he said, simply add the late bills to the load of the next fiscal period.

Fr. Coughlin's Influence on Legislators Bared

President Roosevelt and his administration received high praise today from an adherent of his predecessor when Theodore G. Joslin, speaking before the Boston Rotary Club at the Statler Hotel, lauded the President for his honesty, industry and vision. Joslin was secretary to former President Hoover.

"It is my opinion," he told the gathering of 800, "that President Roosevelt is doing a good job."

Joslin was introduced by Robert Choate. He reminded his hearers that there has probably never been a time in American history when the members of Congress were so "constituent-minded" as they are today and urged the members to write their senators and representatives concerning legislation in which they were interested. Bearing out his contention, he told the following story:

"A certain Congressman," he said, "who comes from not a million miles from where I am standing, came to me a few weeks ago in a quandary. 'I am opposed,' he said to me, 'to the monetization of silver and would have voted against it, but Fr. Coughlin made a speech on it last Sunday night and this morning I got 60 letters from my constituents about it. I don't believe in it, but I'm coming up for election next year and I guess I'll have to vote for it.'"

Joslin asked his hearers to be patient in the face of the $2,000,000,000 budget of the government arguing that this spending was necessary to bring about prosperity. He spoke highly of the efforts of the President through the NRA and the PWA but referred to the CWA as "a goof".

He said that the government is fast buying stock in banks through the Reconstruction finance corporation and that before Spring the government will own or have a voting interest in 85 per cent of the banks of the country.

TRIPLE POISON DEATHS BARED

auskas, 35, who lived at the farm, and worked in a Norwood tannery; Andrew Olson, 45, and Alexander Romaszkowski, 61, both laborers at the farm.

Mary and Steve Baron of Weld ave., Norwood, were arraigned in Dedham court charged with sale of liquor containing wood alcohol, and held in $1000 bail.

ARSENIC IN BRAINS

Additional charges will be lodged against them, Dist. Atty. Dewing said. He would not specify what charges.

Analyses of the organs of the three murder victims showed that so much arsenic was in their systems that it had seeped into their brains, Dewing declared.

The Barons maintain that they did not sell the poison liquor but Mrs. Sauer and her daughter, Irma, 18, say they did, according to police. The daughter went with two victims when they purchased it at the Baron home, police said.

Albert Steinberg, 45, of Dean st., Norwood, also poisoned, recovered after two days on the danger list at Norwood Hospital, but he said he had stayed at the farmhouse, and couldn't help much with his testimony.

The investigation that brought to light the startling story of the murders was conducted by State Police Lieut. Michael Fleming, Chief William H. Sullivan of Norwood and Chief Levi Thompson of Walpole.

POISON IN TWO BOTTLES

The two chiefs told the district attorney that a thorough check had failed to reveal any sales of arsenic in their towns for a considerable period before the killings.

The arsenic "loaded" liquor was in a regular flat pint bottle and in an old ginger ale bottle, police said.

The analyses on the victims and the liquor were conducted by City Chemist George Bolling of Brockton and by chemists at the State House.

New York, Jan. 31 (AP)—Joie Rao, alleged policy racketeer and reputedly one of the prisoners who "ruled" Welfare Island Penitentiary, was taken to the criminal courts today as a witness in a murder trial.

Also taken to the court as witnesses were Ricci Mandia, a Welfare prisoner, and Frank Matzzio, recently transferred from the island to the Raymond st. jail.

They were identified by Theodore Fuller, Negro, a witness in the killing of William Linares, who was stabbed on Welfare Island, July 21 last. Allen Schwartz is on trial, charged with the stabbing.

INSURANCE QUIZ IS DEMANDED

While Insurance company officials were receiving fat salary increases in 1932, holders of industrial policies were losing $55,000,000 through lapses and failure to pay premiums, the legislative committe on insurance was told today. The speaker was Israel Katz, Worcester attorney, who favored not only a cash surrender clause for such policies, and the right to borrow on them, but a sweeping probe of the insurance industry for correction of abuses.

and success, you find energy, and energy sometimes involves surprises. A young English woman, Mrs. Amy Johnson Mollison, you remember, flew from London over oceans, forests, jungles; beat all records, both of men and women, up to that time, and married the man she considered England's next best flier.

Arrested for speeding near Fort Lauderdale on Monday, she got away from the policeman four different times, much to his disgust, and he reports that she scratched his face, hit him and bit him, and told him "she liked a fight." The judge fined her fifty dollars, which seemed reasonable.

OFFICER JAILED IN SHOOTING

"jumped" by Gilboy and four other men in the office. He fired, Stanley asserted, in self-defense, one bullet striking Gilboy in the leg and a second tearing through the door.

The story of Gilboy was vastly different, however. At first the taxi driver said the shooting was an accident, but when he had heard the story told by Stanley, the taxi man said he was in his cab in Scollay sq. when he saw the policeman, who evidently had been drinking.

OFFERED HIM A RIDE

Seeking to protect his friend from being disciplined if he should be sighted by a superior officer of the Milk st. division, in which Scollay sq. is located, Gilboy offered, he said, to drive the policeman home.

Stanley, the taxi driver said, but overlooking that because of his condition, Gilboy proceeded out along the filling station, where Gilboy hopped, he declared, that the officer would "straighten out."

Instead, Stanley became pugilistic when Gilboy refused to let him go into the street again, the driver asserted.

Then, suddenly, Patrolman Stanley pulled out his service revolver and fired at his friend, the driver said. Gilboy went down with a bullet in his leg as a second bullet went through the door, just missing him.

DRIVER'S LEG FRACTURED

One of the men in the office ran out as a cruising car with Sergt. Joseph F. Condon of Milk st. division came along.

Gilboy, after treatment at the Relief Hospital, was moved to City Hospital on order of Dr. Samuel Siddell. Although Police Supt. King had announced Gilboy would appear in court today as a witness in the warrant session, Dr. Siddell said he had suffered a compound fracture of the left leg and would not be able to appear for at least a month.

$8500 ASKED OF 'KING' ESTATE

Indication of the wealth once possessed by Charles King Solomon, gangster, who died practically penniless, was given today when a claim filed against his estate for $8500 for services rendered in making out his income tax schedules for the years 1928 to 1932.

Solomon was slain in the Cotton Club in Roxbury a year ago.

The amount is asked by Julius Rosengard of 53 State st., Boston, of Mrs. Bertha Solomon of Brookline, widow of the murdered man and administratrix of his estate.

Solomon was reputed to be wealthy at the time of his death, but an inventory of his estate revealed that he had left only $3400.

Charles Fourier said that what we call evil is always a perversion of something that is good. The policeman who arrested Amy Mollison encountered a temporary perversion of the energy that makes her one of the world's most wonderful fliers. If he had caught a lady eagle, it would have scratched him also, if possible.

It is announced that four recent discoveries in cancer research have meant more in fighting the disease than all other discoveries from the beginning of time. Most interesting is the fact that a rat, free from cancer, when a cancer is planted in its body, immediately develops an "antibody" that attacks the cancer and often destroys it.

This home-made cure for cancer, within the rat's own body, can be taken, attached to a cancer, implanted and removed, and used to combat cancer in other rats.

No experiments have been made with human beings as yet. Once the cancer is firmly established in the rat's body, however, the creature's system seems to give up the struggle, and no further "antibody cure" is developed.

Scientists warn you that the main cause of cancer is irritation of the tissues. It may come from irritation of the lips, or tongue, irritation of the stomach's mucous membrane, due to taking liquids too hot, irritation of any kind. Violent irritation will cause cancer in a short time, slight irritation, long continued, will produce cancer in the long run. Hence the frequency of cancer in old age. Men and women living longer develop cancer more frequently, as irritation has time to do its work.

Nobody knows how much serious "inoperable" cancer has been caused in women by the curse of tight corsets in days gone by. Don't squeeze any part of your body, or scald it, or otherwise irritate it.

ADMIRAL LAUDS WAR PICTURES

By REAR ADMIRAL WILLIAM C. COLE, U. S. N.
Retired, Commandant of the Twelfth Naval District.

San Francisco, Jan. 31—The present campaign for preparedness carried on by the Hearst newspapers is commendable and particularly opportune.

The war pictures being published by the Hearst newspapers unquestionably will aid toward preparedness if they are taken, not only in their gruesome aspects, but with the understanding by our people that all these terrible experiences would not have come to our boys had we in those days had a national defense force of sufficient strength.

This would have made it clear to the combatants that the tide of victory would be definitely set towards the side upon which the United States threw its moral and physical influence.

Further, I hope the influence of the Hearst newspapers will continue to be used to assure the continued expenditure of national funds to the end that we may have as an instrument of diplomacy for the enforcement of national policy a navy second to none within the limits of existing or future treaty obligations.

END UP TO PRESIDENT

You can still hear that type of banker who comes to Washington, telling officials that this depression can be traced back to the waste of the Great War. But infinitely worse was the waste of wealth in the great peace. War blew up some wealth, but peace blew in still more.

That stock exchanges, uncontrolled, hastened rather than deterred the spree leading to quicksand from which we are emerging, no one denies.

It is almost certain that the President, though realizing the legitimate function of issuing tokens of mortgage and ownership such as stocks and bonds, will continue to stand against lies, deceit and promises painted as fair by an elaborate narcotic security sales system.

It is equally the opinion in Washington that the rigged dealings in these tokens of wealth by exchanges, including the old practices and manipulations of pools and pumpery, must not come back.

The President surely wants to put an end to it.

GAS OVERCOMES 5 IN FACTORY

Haverhill, Jan. 31—Five employes of the G. H. Hoyt & Sons paperbox factory at 261 River st., including three women, were overcome by gas fumes from a defective exhaust pipe leading to the roof.

The five victims toppled from their benches and other employes rushed to the street in panic.

Miss Elizabeth Jones of 258 Main st., Miss Hessie Upton of Warren st. and William H. Johnson of 1 Clinton st. were so seriously affected they were taken to Gale hospital. Mrs. Anna Shea of Peabody st., Bradford, and Harvey French were taken home after receiving medical attention.

The employes were unaware of the danger menacing them until they saw Miss Upton fall. Soon the others collapsed and there was a rush for the exits.

Police Sgt. Hagen Dying at Hospital

Sergt. Albert M. Hagan, of the Jamaica Plain station, was dying today at City Hospital from a cerebral hemorrhage. He was rushed to the hospital in a police ambulance from his home, 262 Chambers st., West End. Mrs. Hagan called police when she could not arouse him.

"CROWD: A LARGE NUMBER OF PERSONS congregated or collected into a close body without order; a great number of persons; especially the great body of people; the populace; the masses; the multitude . . ." a la Webster's.

They were all there at the Hotel Statler last evening at the President's Birthday Ball . . . it was a crowd peppered with celebrities, dignitaries, politicians, society and the hoi polloi . . . the latter by far the most interesting to watch because they were having a grand time.

MRS. JAMES D. ROOSEVELT

The loveliest girls in town came with their escorts . . . whitehaired matrons arrived in their sables and ermines . . . theatrical entertainers preened themselves in their colorful finery . . . in the main, it was a cosmopolitan crowd and the Imperial ballroom, the foyer and lobbies were alive with representatives from every walk of life and every profession . . . a tribute to our President, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

We stood in the balcony and Ruby Newman conducted his large orchestra and watched the dancers swaying to and fro, a kaleidoscope of varying colors, the delicate hues of the women's gowns thrown into sharp relief against the black and white of the "tails" of the men . . . very colorful and brilliant.

At 11 the grand march formed and came down the center of the ballroom, gayly decorated with golden eagles on a red and black ground . . . Mayor Mansfield and his wife were in the lead with Franklin Roosevelt, Jr., and Mrs. James D. Roosevelt arm in arm . . .

Miss Alice Clark in Merry Throng

MR. AND MRS. PAUL RUST, JR., chairman of the Boston ball, were next in line . . . Mrs. Rust was very sweet in snowy white chiffon with skirt designed of tiny ruffles . . . it was she who later on raffled off part of the President's birthday cake, netting a good round sum at one dollar a slice . . .

In the throng we glimpsed a merry party which included the handsome Dr. George Clark and his debutante daughter, Miss Alice Clark, a beautiful brunette frocked in white satin . . . Miss Harriet Moseley, a post-debutante, also gowned in the virginal satin, Margaret Emerson, a charming foil in black taffeta, and Messrs. George Clark and Nathaniel Clark . . .

Miss Anne Clifford, petite Junior Leaguer, in black taffeta was hostess to a large party in a box which included Mrs. Ralph Williams, also in black, and Charlotte Sherborn, merry brunette in brilliant red taffeta . . .

Lovely in blonde lace was Mrs. James Cunningham Gray, Jr., a bright blue velvet sash around her slender waist . . . Constance Learned was smart in white crepe heavily fringed . . .

Dorothy Preston in Violet Gown

IN ANOTHER BOX WE GLIMPSED Miss Dorothy Preston gowned in violet, of which shade we saw many from orchid to purple . . . a notable person was Mrs. Nathaniel Emmons in a lovely shade of Parma violet, topped with baby ermine wrap and wearing a crystal tiara in her golden curls.

Mrs. James Roosevelt looked well in lacquere red crepe studded with gold polka-dots . . . Ellen Pierce was stunning in black crepe with wide girdle of brilliants escorted by the good-looking David Cheever.

James M. Curley and his daughter arrived with a party, Miss Mary outstandingly well-dressed in a costume of heavy white crepe with black bodice, girdled with a Kelly green cord.

In the older group we glimpsed Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, looking handsomer than we have seen her for years in luxurious sable coat over a grey flowered satin . . .

Mrs. Edwin Webster was beautiful in black velvet gown with bodice of silver sequins, her lovely white hair arranged with cluster of curls high in the back as it was worn in the 1900's . . . her sister, cheery Mrs. Henry Harris was also in black velvet trimmed with ermine . . .

We noted several Katharine Hepburn bangs but not on the society girls . . . they were very effective.

Regal in Garnet Velvet

MRS. FREDERICK WHITWELL accompanied by her charming husband, Mr. Whitwell, was regal in garnet velvet wearing beautiful garnet and diamond jewelry. They are among society's most popular hosts.

Susan Means in red velvet and Mary Jane Dewey in brown taffeta shot with gold were among the debutante group present . . . Martha Chapin and Priscilla Phelan arrived late and started talking up their ball, the Black and White, to be given soon for sweet charity.

Mrs. Frank Johnson (Shirley Swaim) wore her cerise taffeta which is very striking, huge ruffles at the hem and dropping off of the shoulder . . .

Mrs. Stanton White in a lovely green and white soft satin was in a party which included Miss Ordrey White in peach satin, Rita Curley in golden sequins and Eileen Curley wearing red bagheera.

Tiara on her blonde hair, Mrs. George von L. Meyer was in Mr. and Mrs. Gaspar Bacon's party which included Mrs. Philip Stockton in chic black velvet frock, Betty Stockton, debutante daughter, escorted by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., and Anne Tuckerman in black taffeta.

Isabella Grandin wore dark red trimmed with sable and merry Mrs. Whitfield Painter (Margorie Morrill) and her good-looking husband were the centre of a gay group . . .

Virginia Ellis in Purple Gown

ADA DEWSON WAS SEEN and Mary Otis in old rose . . . Mrs. George C. Vaughan was smart as usual . . . Mrs. Thomas Claflin was sweet in black lace and Virginia Ellis, a deb, wore the purple shades . . . Marie Murray, well-loved contralto, was outstanding in white satin and ostrich.

It was an outstanding success, reminiscent of large balls of bygone days . . .

Lest we forget . . . we tasted the President's birthday cake and found it excellent . . . with thanks to M. A. P. Guerriero.

We also learned that Betsy Cushing Roosevelt's pretty sister, Barbara Cushing, is the recipient of devoted attentions of Francis Cunliff of Beacon st . . . there may be news for you soon, who knows?

Mr. Sam Parker is giving a luncheon at the Copley-Plaza on Saturday before the Alliance Francaise for a group of his friends . . . Raymonde Longe will speak on the happy year of 1900. . .

in the social world

With Dorothy Whipple Fry

MISS ASTRID RICE is among the attractive debutantes working in behalf of the Black and White Ball to benefit the North Shore Baby's Hospital. The invitations have arrived and guests are urgently requested to appear in black or white costumes.

That exquisite creation that Astrid Rice has in her wardrobe at the moment will in all probability be chosen by this young lady for the occasion. It is white satin with long graceful sleeves and the modish epaulettes the slim figure of the young lady is beautifully offset by the line of the neck. White is exquisite on blondes, and we will certainly anticipate a glimpse of Miss Rice in this white satin creation.

Mrs. William Dana Orcutt

Glimpsed Mrs. Thomas G. Frothingham smartly frocked the other morning in a tailored black ensemble. She is working for that glamorous evening that is to take place at the Harrison Gray Otis home where New England antiques by candlelight will be the theme of entertainment on Feb. 6 and 7. To our way of thinking it is one of the most charming things that Boston achieves and the friends of Miss Agnes Osborne are looking forward to seeing her representation of Lady Wentworth, her ancestor exquisitley done, by Copley.

Mrs. William Dana Orcutt is chairman of the committee and with her artistic background and experience of course adds color and vitality to the plan.

Mrs. Alton Thorndike, also glimpsed gowned in a smart black morning frock with touches of green. It is she who is arranging the portraits and the entertainment committee is headed by Mrs. Frederick S. Blodgett of Newton always interested in affairs of antiquity.

People are becoming more and more interested in reading these days. Instead of the eternal round of bridge games we find the attention of many socially prominent people being held by reading hours with tea served after the reading. Among those who gather for an afternoon's reading at the home of Mrs. Lothrop Withington on Clyde st., was Mrs. Sherman Damon wearing a very bright and cheerie coral red wool frock with brown accessories. As a matter of fact we have scarcely seen more of cheerie red than we noticed. Perhaps a forerunner of the extreme cold.

This Is Life

—By Robert E. Rogers—

IT LOOKS to me as if the city desk of this here Palladium is trying to show me up. I have received from it a clipping about a Chicago Tribune Press Service dispatch concerning a manifesto by one Prof. W. F. Tait, head of the department of psychology, McGill University, Montreal, who writes as follows concerning the controversy over sterilization.

"If you wish to cure the ills of society by sterilization, you should start with the over-intelligent. The worst crimes, the most widespread blights, are not caused by subnormal or mental defectives, but by intelligent people. Child labor, sweatshops, religious, political and racial persecution, stock manipulation, bank delinquencies, graft at the expense of the country, intrigues and high-grade murder, war and its horrors—are not caused by morons but by the intelligent."

Small Proposition

THE CLIPPING concludes: "There must be an answer to this. But we can't think just now what the answer is." So the city desk hands it on to me! I hope he hasn't on any money on the answer. For the moment I wish I were Arthur Brisbane. He'd know! But I'll have to make a try.

First, there is not, necessarily, any answer to this. It is not impossible that people of a low mentality constitute the most stable part of a society. The proportion of morons who are criminal or criminally insane is probably small. The majority remain intellectually below the average, more or less ignorant and illiterate, incapable of all but the most elementary or poorly paid work, but laborious, sober, faithful, affectionate and orderly. They make good servants and dependable workers. In the words of the book of Esdras as quoted by Edmund Burke, "They shall not sit in the judgment—but they shall maintain the state of the world."

It is a perfectly arguable premise that ignorant people of low mentality constitute the most solid and stable of populations. It is perfectly arguable premise that such is Nature's intention. Nature, perhaps, sees the animal level as the healthy level. Man's invention and development of what we call brains, instead of intuition, may be the cause of all our trouble. Intelligence may be natural but intellect may be a disease, an incurable disease like cancer. I shouldn't be surprised.

Balance Is Upset

THERE ARE, perhaps, biological strains that have become immunized to intellect, through long adaptation, and so can handle it with reasonable safety. Certain stocks may prida themselves on getting along without many of the social superstitions of other races and people. But when unwise theorists try to inoculate backward peoples with advanced ideas, the result can only be tragedy. Nature's balance of safe ignorance is upset. See China, Mexico, Russia, etc., as well as certain levels of our own population.

Similarly, intellectual concepts that can be safely handled by superior people, an aristocracy immunized to ideas, may act like a virulent disease when spread among the great majority of people of lower intelligence. There, I think, is where Prof. Tait is wrong. He is perfectly right when he says that the social evils of modern society are worst, in their universal application and their devastating effect, than the crime resulting from feeble-mindedness. But they are not caused by the intelligent. They are caused by the ideas conceived by the intellectuals spread abroad through the population and applied by the less intelligent even by the less intelligent.

It is not religion, but the twisted applications of religion by the lesser intelligences, that makes religion a horror. Not the essentially aseptic ideas of individualism or socialism, but their unnecessary cruelty and stupidity when the average man tries to work them out. The very devices intended to make war too horrible to endure are those which make war so terrible and long drawn out. The marvels of technical invention in the hands of stupid and greedy men produce permanent unemployment. The automobile, which was invented for a blessing, becomes a manslaughtering curse. The holy crusade of prohibition breeds crime and lawlessness. The high ideal of democracy becomes the instrument of graft and inefficiency. Fine inventions like the film and the radio become vulgarised and debased. Mr. Roosevelt's great dream of the NRA gets into the hands of General Johnson.

Slow Development

IT BOILS DOWN to this. The Mind of the Race, when it attempts to deal with human relations, which means political, economic and social questions, has not yet developed comparably its command of our physical world. It cannot safeguard itself yet from the effects of its command over Nature. Nor can it safeguard itself yet from the results of the thinking of the few thousand developed intellects that have strayed so far out of the path of Nature as to be abnormal and mischievous in their notions.

If that be true, then Prof. Tait is right and we ought to sterilize all the Brains Trusts everywhere. That is, if we believe that brains are not Nature's intention but a disease. But supposing that Nature really is aiming at brains, seeking to evolve intellect out of the stubbornest material. Remember that Nature takes millions and hundreds of millions of years in its processes.

Possibly only a very few of us are human yet. Possibly most of us are still subhuman, experimenting with human ideas. In that case it might be really helpful to eliminate the stragglers, if what we need is speed. But if Nature does not need speed, why bother? Nature will work it out. Caught as we are in the long, long inter-regnum between the kingdom of instinct and the kingdom of mind—amphibians, so to speak—we can only make the best of it on Nature's system of trial and error.

Religion, Science and Man

—By Aldous Huxley—

LONDON—Professor James Leuba, of Bryn Mawr, is a writer whose books are always deserving of respectful attention. His most recent volume, God or Man (Henry Holt), is one which no student of contemporary society can afford to neglect.

Professor Leuba begins with a discussion of "miraculous cures." He is skeptical. But then so are many of the professedly religious. A committee appointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury in 1924 to investigate the subject reported that there was no evidence that spiritual healing could produce cures different in kind from the cures performed by psychotherapists outside the pale of religion. Professor Leuba goes further and proclaims that the efficiency of psychotherapists is much higher than that of religious healers and miraculous images.

WITH REGARD to character formation and reformation Professor Leuba's conclusions are identical. He considers that secular methods for building up a desirable personality are already more efficient than religious methods and that, by the systematic application of scientific thought to the problem, they can be made to fulfil their moralizing function far better than religion can hope to do. He points out, moreover, that many of the devices used by religious teachers for the formation and reformation of character have no essential connection with religion, but can be (and are) employed by lay educators without any reference to the supernatural.

"The present age," he concludes, "is characterized not by a new aim, but by a new method." Ideals remain the same (being the expressions of innate tendencies, they have no reason to change). But instead of employing religious methods of attempting their realization, we have begun to use secular means. Professor Leuba's belief is that by a consistent application of scientific methods to the problems of human life men will advance toward the fulfilment of their ideal purposes much more rapidly and certainly than they were able to do when using the devices supplied by the religions.

IT is not very helpful to criticize a book for what it does not contain; but I cannot refrain from drawing attention to what seems to me a notable omission. Professor Leuba has failed to mention the modern religion substitutes, of which the most important and the most harmful is nationalism.

Most human beings feel a strong desire to believe in something certain and unquestionable, to evade responsibility by abandoning themselves to authority, and to feel themselves associated with other human beings in a common cause. The established religions used to give such people what they wanted; but for many the old doctrines are now unacceptable. They turn for satisfaction elsewhere.

If these seceders from the religions all came under the influence of intelligent humanists like Professor Leuba, all would be well. But alas! most of them leave frying pan for fire. Unable, because of a smattering of scientific education, to believe in the teachings of the religions, they find no difficulty in accepting the equally incredible and more mischievous doctrines of nationalism. Why men should strain at one camel and swallow another is a matter which it would take too long to discuss here. The fact remains that, at this moment of history, the nationalistic camel is easier to swallow than the religious camel. Nationalism is a crusading pseudo-religion. How shall it be combated? This is a matter to which Professor Leuba might fittingly have devoted at least a chapter.

Reading and Writing

—By William Soskin—

TIMID SOULS who hate green phosphorescence, dark places and fragrant poisons should have nothing whatever to do with a book called The Spider in the Cup. It is a story so subtly ominous and so quietly menacing that its author has not needed to resort to a single scream or a shot in the night or any other stock-in-trade of the writers of hackneyed horror stories.

I am for more novels of this sort. The sound and the fury of the average mystery tale with its dreary succession of clues, suspects, compounded murders and mathematical solutions is beginning to grow tiresome even to the most avid of detectakiff fans. Some of the better practitioners in the field—the members of Mr. Chesterton's circle of ethical mystery writers, for instance—try to preserve a semblance of character portrayal and solid narrative in their work. Even they, however, provide very few calories of entertainment.

Mr. Shearing is a British writer who apparently does not place too much faith in the cold English exterior, the polite surface to the outer world. He has taken, for our great benefit, a typically restrained and neat British young lady and let her disintegrate into her component parts—hot, frightening, passionate little parts that have small relationship to her mass composure. All this he has accomplished gently and relentlessly. It comes as a great surprise even to the girl herself, Lavinia Pierrepoint.

At Last! She Knows

LAVINIA was the daughter of a pleasure-loving and adventurous man who deserted her mother. The mother also had something of a sensuous and alcoholic past. Lavinia, living with her scholarly, retired grandfather, grew up with definitely degrading memory of her parents, and, in reaction against her irresponsible life, became a self-contained, primly mannered and highly restrained young lady. So restrained, indeed, and so little responsive to human warmth, that she was regarded by her fellow villagers and her servant as somebody slightly ominous.

Mr. Shearing, the meanie, reveals the girl to herself with a fine Italian hand. The title of the book, taken from The Winter's Tale, suggests his method. Mr. Shakespeare put it this way:

There may be in the cup
A spider steep'd and one may drink, depart,
And yet partake no venom, for his knowledge
Is not infected: but if one present
The abhorred ingredient to his eye, make known
How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his sides
With violent hefts. I have drunk and seen the spider.

Piety a Coat Easily Shed

THE secret of the horror in Mr. Shearing's history of Lavinia lies in his brilliant ability to create atmosphere, to suggest dark depths in his characters through a meticulous and studied exploitation of external details.

Generally the story involves two scenes. One is the prim town of Aylsbridge, in England, where Lavinia lives above a chemist's shop that holds strange, exotic lure for her, and where the nineteenth century virtues of diligence and piety do not conceal the essential friqidity with which she views her world. She strolls through the town a model young lady, but with sufficient provocation she would tread its streets a Lady Macbeth in broad daylight. The other scene to which she is transferred when she becomes a lady companion, is a sensuous, sleepy place in Southern France. There, in a wealthy and degenerating household, she meets the man who pierces her armor of contained virtue. There she is involved in the toxicology that eventually reveals the furious poisons coursing through her body.

Gradually the heritage which Lavinia has tried to resist creeps up on her. By a series of dramatic complications involving poisonings, amatory excursions, police cases and other highly romantic matters, the girl is finally left on the road to a degeneration quite similar to her mother's.

Nowhere in the course of the book does he indulge in any esay obiter dicta or any discursive essays on the meanings of his story. He is too expert a dramatist for that. But he can make Lavinia's gesture in sipping a glass of sherry when she feels fatigued seem so significant and augur such disaster that I am afraid to go foraging in the ice box for a snack on the theory that it probably is an expression of some inherited weakness in myself, something that will make me end my days a helpless derlict, the victim of my ravaging appetites.

May I Drive You Home, Mrs. Murgatroyd?

By Ogden Nash

Illustrations by Soglow

HERE'S a statement that anybody who feels so inclined is welcome to make a hearty mental meal of:
People who possess operators' licenses ought never to ride in a car that anybody else is at the wheel of.
There seems to be something about sitting in a car and watching some one else drive
That brings out all the worst traits of the best man or woman alive.
Now you, my friend, sitting up there at the controls of your streamlined chariot may actually have won gold medals as a driving virtuoso,
But to anybody in the seat beside you or behind you you are something less than so-so.
You may think a person's disposition is seraphic,
But wait until they start correcting your method of steering through traffic.
People who habitually drive their own cars at fifty miles an hour turn vermilion and magenta
If you go over fifteen or twenta,
And they get palpitation of the pulse
Every time you try to get by anybody ulse.
It seems to be their point of view
That you are some kind of fanatic bent on murdering or mutilating them, even in the face of the certainty that in so doing you must murder or mutilate yourself too.
They are always jumping and wincing and jamming their feet down on an imaginary brake
Or making noises as if they had just discovered that their bed was inhabitated by a snake,
Or else they start a casual conversation that begins with remarks about the weather and other banalities,
And leads up to a pointed comment on the horrifying number of annual automobile fatalities.

THEY tell you not only about cars that actually are coming, but also cars that might be coming, and they do it so kindly and gently
That it's obvious they consider you deaf and blind as well as rather deficient mently.
And when at last you somehow manage to get to where you've been going do they say thank you in a voice full of plaster of Paris and bitter aloes,
And get down out of the car as if they were getting down off the gallows,
And they walk away with the Is-it-really-over expression of a lot of rescued survivors,
And you go off and make a lot of remarks to yourself about back-seat drivers,
And you vow that come what may you yourself will never join their ranks, no indeed;
And then the next day somebody gives you a lift and you find yourself bathed with cold moisture the moment they shift the gears into third speed.

THE truth of the matter, madams and sirs.
Is that we are all born chauffeurs;
Or, to put it another way before retiring to curl up with a bad book on the sofa,
Everybody in the car can drive better than the chauffeur.

To the City

I SHALL leave you! Your terrible towers
Are reeling toward the stars,
And I loathe your iron flowers
That bloom in smoke and showers
Over your bright bazaars.

I shall leave you, dreadful City,
And the ways of your agate men.
I shall leave your pavements gritty
For the peace of the woodland's pity—
But I will come back again!

NEW YORK has always been a magnet to draw unto itself the flotsam and jetsam of the whole world.

They used to say—old men when I was a boy—that every foreigner who came to our shores dreamed of a city of fabulous wealth; that some of them, upon getting here, would ask immediately, in their ignorance, where Gold street was, imagining they could pick up in that thoroughfare the yellow coins after which they thought it had been named! When they come here today it is a sadly different story.

By degrees we came to absorb this foreign population: Russian Jews—there are now over two million Jews in New York—Germans, Irish, Poles, Slovaks, Italians, French, Greeks and Slavs, Spanish, Swedes, Norwegians and Danes—every possible element that the Old World sent to our shores. A vast cosmopolitan city is the result today, a town bursting with every known nationality, our streets echoing with the chatter of foreign tongues.

AND Asia, too, has sent its full quota of Chinese and Japanese. We have our Chinatown on this Eastern coast, as they have it in San Francisco. We have that, as well as our Little Italy, our Jewish quarter, our innumerable Turnverein halls and our Greek restaurants. Conglomerate, sprawling, shimmering New York! Everything is here—Armenians, Turks, Egyptians—yes, even a handful of Americans.

If there is Rivington street, there is likewise Park avenue. If there is Hester street, there is also Fifth avenue. If there is McDougal Alley, there is Harlem with its Negroes. If there is the squalor of the Bowery, there is, a long way from it, the aristocracy of Sutton place and Beekman place.

NOWHERE on earth do things change as rapidly as in conglomerate, restless New York, A city of moods. A city of energy and hope and despair. A city of terror, too; and yet, for almost every one of us, a city that we cannot leave.

For the spell of Manhattan is irresistible. And the pathos of our love for it is one of the amazing manifestations of our modern times. For we love the evil along with the good; we cherish the cruelty that clings to so great a city as we cherish the kindness that hides within it. We are bound, we are chained; yet all of us long for the moment when we can escape from the shackles that surround us. Though we are bruised and torn spiritually; though we feel, with the woman in one of Zoe Akins' plays, that we should rather bleed in New York than be happy elsewhere, always there is the urge to leave the siren city. But, paradoxically, the urge to come back is even stronger.

Vagabondia

—By Bruno Lessing—

ROME—You don't hear much of the King here. Occasionally you read that he received a foreign minister bringing new credentials or laid a corner-stone somewhere. Laying corner-stones always reminds me of hens. He seems to take no part in the social life of Rome. He lives here in a palace several blocks long which must have over a thousand rooms. Some of the rooms as well as the beautiful garden of the palace are opened to tourists when the King is away. I saw them years ago, but any memory of them is merely a jumble of miles of paintings and tapestry and rich decorations.

I've often wondered what the King does to kill time. He is known as a great coin collector and he likes to read. Mussolini looks after all his affairs of State, so he must have a lot of idle time on his hands. If he ever got really lonesome I'd be glad to run over and play pinochle or Russian bank with him, only I wouldn't play for more than fifty cents a game.

Like King George of England, Vittore Emmanuele does not butt into world affairs. They both keep their crowns and their "divine" authority wrapped up in cotton and moth-balls.

Special Speech in Czech

A CHAP I know—an American here on a visit—came into the Excelsior Bar the other day with a sheepish grin on his face.

"I've been sight-seeing," he explained. "I bought a ticket for one of those sight-seeing buses a few days ago. They told me the guide spills a description of everything in English, German and French. It started to rain, so I put the trip off. Today I reached the place just as one of the big buses was pulling out. I made a spurt and jumped on board. When we got to some ruins the guide began to jabber a woozy streak that I couldn't make head or tail of. He kept it up for an hour. When we got to the Coliseum all the passengers got out and went inside. I said to the guide, 'I thought you explained things in English.' 'I do, as a rule,' he said, 'but this is a private party of a Czechoslovakian society, and they hired the whole bus. I'm only talking Czech today. You shouldn't have come on board.' 'Shouldn't is right,' I said, and I took a taxi."

Putting Down a Nazi

THERE are many Germans in Rome and more keep coming. At a party last night I met several of them, good-natured Nazis on a holiday. With utmost cheerfulness they told me tales of atrocities that made me shiver. Jews were still being deprived of their money and, in some cases, even of their furniture. But were not allowed to leave Germany. They just had to stay to be tortured.

"It is too bad," said one of these men, "that your people in America believe the stories of atrocities in Germany that have been spread."

"My God!" I exclaimed. "Aren't you spreading them yourself?" He actually looked surprised.

"About the Jews, you mean?" he asked. "We do not call those atrocities. I mean cutting off children's hands and that sort of thing."

Which left me sort of dazed. So when, afterward, he said, "If you Americans understood our Fuehrer you would love him," I replied, "I do love him. It is just a misunderstanding in the use of words. When we love a man we like to see him eat up a hot one." Whereupon he became suspicious and wouldn't talk any more.

A God for the Shifty

AS YOU walk along one of the roads running through the Palatine, where the Roman emperors first built their palaces, you come upon the ruins of a small altar. A very simple affair built of travertine, the coarse brown stone found in Tivoli, out of which the Coliseum was built. (This fact is emphasized by the antiquarians for the reason that most of the altars of ancient Rome were built of the purest marble.)

It bears a Latin inscription meaning, "To god or goddess, whoever it may be." It is called the Altar to the Unknown God. It lingers in my mind as a fascinating thing, keep wondering what type of man it was who with the long calendar of Roman and Greek gods to select from preferred to honor a deity unknown to him. And whether he was the first man to realize that, in a way, all gods are unknown.

How Rome Got Started

READ John Dennie's book, Rome of To-day and Yesterday, published by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Didn't get a chance to finish it, but something tells me I'm going to steal a lot of his stuff, when time to time, through merely forgetting where I read it. He gives a fascinating account of Rome's geological beginning. It seems that, at one time, the Mediterranean covered all this region. When the waters receded subterranean volcanoes got busy and threw up mountains and high plains.

From out of the sea vast quantities of stone, ashes and lava were spouted into the air and fell down to cover the earth and provide building material for future Rome. He tells how the hills appeared and were covered with forests. Then came elephants, mastodons, rhinoceros (or I or cases) and hippos. These gradually disappeared, but even today their fossilized bones are found in this territory. They've even found a cousin of the Neanderthal Man in Italy.

This circus, of course, took place millions of years ago. Rome's principal benefit from it was to find the wonderful stones with which her city was built. You see those stones today and marvel at their beauty. Who knows but that Nature was working in cahoots with Rome's destiny to become the Eternal City!

ONLY UNDESIRABLES REMAIN BACHELORS -:- RISE TO COOKING FAME WITH SAUCES

Something Is Usually Wrong

By Sheilah Graham

I WANT TO TALK seriously to the unmarried ladies of New England. You are neglecting your duties of husband-catching. What, you say all the men you know are married? That is almost true—but not quite.

I myself have met five bachelors in this city of husbands, and I am still wondering how they managed to escape.

All their friends, directly they are old enough to wear suspenders were led kindly but firmly to the marriage land, whence no man can return without the the scars of alimony.

But these five men, despite the temptations they face hourly, have held on to the frail raft of bachelorhood.

Take Edward P. (no one else has taken him, so we might as well use him here). He is 56 and rich. His body is as lithe as a schoolboy's, and his face, while not outrageously handsome, well, I've seen a lot worse.

Edward is rather a cantankerous old boy. Little things like the laundry not coming home on time, or keeping him waiting for a few minutes make him sulk and threaten to stay home, "And you can play by yourselves, so there!"

Edward dresses exquisitely, and receives invitations to all the parties—and he goes to them, but still he remains a bachelor. WHY?

Another of my five bachelors is a moderately successful lawyer of 50. He is bald and ugly, but I've seen balder, uglier men led up the aisle of marriage.

To start an argument with this man is like putting yourself in a straitjacket. The more you struggle, the crazier you become. In cold, clear legal adjectives he will prove you do not know what the hell you are talking about.

They say this man was "in love with a woman 30 years ago, but that she spurned him for another. But what about the women who came into his life afterward? Why did they let him escape?

Now listen to the strange case of John F. He is 32, very old, good-looking, rich—BUT A BACHELOR! John has that hungry look in his eyes that denotes he would not be averse to having a nice woman "understand" him.

But John is overpoweringly selfish. He is also so rude no woman has been able to spend an evening with him without weeping.

I—and I hope you—begin to have a glimmering of why John is still a bachelor.

Tommy J. is 25, but no woman shares his income—which isn't at all bad—a hundred and fifty dollars a week. He seems to do quite well with the "dolls" (this word—not mine). Many an evening I have seen him sweet-babying a pair of dimpld blue eyes.

Tommy is a big spender. He thinks nothing of wasting fifty dollars in one evening. But there is something about Tommy that is unpleasant. He always looks dirty and untidy, and theologian "Even his best friends wouldn't tell him." was born after an advertising genius had had a talk with Tommy. Why he remained a bachelor? Yours is telling me.

The only other bachelor I know is an individual who looks 46, but who might easily be 66.

His mouth is weak and obstinate; his eyes are deceitful and cunning. His idea of a joke is to pour out the milk of a baby's bottle and substitute Bran' Ugh! He is not even a bachelor—he is a reptile.

And now, dear ladies, I will tell you how these bachelors have escaped marriage—that is, if you do not already know.

No woman wants them. And that, in a world where almost any man will do for a husband, is very damning.

New Foot Notes for Spring

By PRUNELLA WOOD

LIGHT footwear (light in color and light in weight) is the stampede in shoes just now. Galoshes we may have on a handy shelf, but we are adding pastel suedes to our wardrobes, wearing them up here with spring hostess gowns and evening frocks, and with crepe spectator frocks and evening gowns if we go South.

Linen seems to be a lot of news in the shoe field just now, along with suede. (Suede is news because this charming material for some occult reason used to be sacred to winter shoes.) Linen is being put into oxfords, pumps, sandals, and flat rubber-soled sports shoes. It is to be had in the pastel rainbow, in such hardy accent colors as seal brown and navy blue, and in checked, striped, or printed designs.

Linen lines linen shoes, too, insuring a firm, soft, cool model that can be kept clean with a minimum of effort and wear.

It can be said truthfully, and with some rejoicing, that the sandal which was pushed out of the spot a bit by high cut shoes a year ago is back again with renewed frenzy. Barefoot models are just as rife as once they were, with a great todo over pedicures involving bright nail enamels much to the fore on the Gulf Stream sector.

Those parti-colored shoes of suede with open toes are great numbers around now to suit one of these fancy nail effects and they do say that the blonds go for black enamel, which will set off a shoe of most delicate shades, with green enamel or honey when that is the high shade of the particular shoe at feeted.

Shoes to wear with short when their wearer is indulging in fairly violent games have adopted the sure, ankle-supporting swank of the ghillie type of shoe. When you must wear a flat-heeled shoe, this is one of the more becoming models.

Smart Clothes for Little Women

By Victoria Caines

WITH ALL the ballyhoo bestowed on "Little Women," thanks to La Hepburn's picture and Louisa's book, precious little attention has been paid to the Little Women of real life—those diminutive five-footers with a very few inches more or less. They have been the Cinderellas of the fashion world, where everything seems to be styled for their more stately step-sisters. If a frock is smart, it's sure to be the wrong size, and if by some miracle it does fit the shorter figure, it's usually hopelessly dowdy. Up till now, the petite woman has spent most of her life having hemlines lifted, sleeves shortened and waistlines raised—alterations which never looked right anyway.

THE L. W. R.

At last, however, there's real relief in sight for the smaller woman. Not the N. R. A. or the C. W. A. or any of our various alphabetically-inclined governmental agencies are responsible for this L. W. R. (Little Women's Relief), but our own bright fashion minds have devoted some of their best thoughts to the subject recently, with some startling results. We women can wear anything that the stately sylphs do, they firmly declare, provided it is properly proportioned to their figures. To accomplish this, they have analyzed the typical short woman's figure, slim or stout as the case may be. This is not merely a matter of shorter skirts and sleeves—all the measurements must be altered accordingly to say nothing of the narrower shoulders and wider hips which are special problems of the petite type.

SEMI-BOLERO BEST

However, the result of all this high-powered analysis has been a series of styles for smaller women that is the last word in smartness. No longer is she condemned to "old-lady" modes on account of her size. These models include such high-style notes as Schiaparelli's "windblown" silhouette, Vionet's piastrona, petal necklines and sleeves and lots of others that have hitherto been reserved for the showgirl siren. While the fluffy-ruffle type of thing is taboo, of course, any one fitty of flat, yet flattering effects in jabots of fishnet lace, revers of contrasting color, collars, etc. And the "little one's" best bet is a semi-bolero frock with the bolero coming only to the short waist, leaving the back perfectly plain. This covers a multitude of sins, since a large bust, a heavy diaphragm or fleshy rolls under the arms are all hidden under the charitable lines of the standard bolero. Diagonal lines are good, too, and can be had in clever crossed-over effects, but avoid the abhorred "surplice" style that stamps a frock immediately as "matronly." And straight, very smooth effects, indeed, are achieved by inverted V's in front, in plain colors or prints against a dark background.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

(Posed by Claudette Colbert)

By Carol Ames

TODAY THIS QUESTION comes from a highly intelligent young woman who holds a responsible position:

"I have tried everything to keep the cuticle around my finger nails smooth. It seems to me there is always a bit of cuticle lingering no matter how careful I am, but of course I haven't much time to give to manicures, as I am a very busy person. Can you tell me of something to keep the nails clear—some cream or something that is reasonably quick?"

I certainly can—and will. There is a small bottle of reddish pink stuff that you put on your nails and leave on, wetting them thoroughly all around the end of the finger. In three minutes you wash it off with water, or soap and water and you will find your nails miraculously free of any dead skin. It's quite magic in its work, and not only an inexpensive, but easily found product. It saves time and is delightfully satisfactory.

One young woman writer me about a perfume she bought in a small bottle and which she leaves in the drawer with her silk under things. She says it doesn't really perfume the clothes, but it makes them sweet and fresh. It's so concentrated that with the cork in (having been once opened) there is enough of it escapes to give the clothes a delightful fragrance. "The thing I like about it," she says, "is that it doesn't interfere with any other perfume you may be using."

It's not strong when used this way. If you use the same perfume on your arm or back of your ears after you finish dressing, you should, of course, use it sparingly. Straight out of the bottle it's strong. You can't get the best out of fine perfumes by cousing yourself or your clothes with it.

I know the perfume she mentioned. She is 100 per cent right about it. It's delicate and should be used sparingly.

"I want a cleansing cream that isn't too light to cleanse thoroughly," writes K. G.

I've got the name of it. It's light, lasting, doesn't get rancid, very slightly bleaching, not expensive. You can use it for years and not tire of it. Be glad to give you the name. Cheaper to buy it in larger quantities. It goes so much farther.

"What's the darkest shade of lip stick you know of? I want a very dark one. My hair is red, but I take the darkest shade and I can't seem to find what I want."—R. T.

Yes I do know of one and it is what I would consider about the darkest red I have yet encountered. If it were any darker it would be black I suppose.

If you'd like to know the names of the preparations mentioned above, and where they may be purchased, I will be glad to tell you. Just telephone Carol Ames, Woman's Page, Boston Evening American (the number is LIB. 4000). Or if you prefer writing, send in a stamped, self-addressed envelope for apersonal reply.

You Need Know But Few Basic Recipes

By Martha Lee

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

CONSIDER THE MANY, many different kinds of spaghetti and chop suey made from one recipe, or let's take sauces—there are innumerable kinds—but the clever housewife need only have a few recipes and a lot of imagination. When we say sauce, does your mind immediately run to a white sauce? Haven't you seen it plopped down on just every conceivable kind of food excepting, fortunately, soup or dessert? There is no excuse for a sauce unless it is perfectly seasoned that is its mission in life, to be full of flavor and yet abound in simplicity.

A letter from one of our readers says, "I enjoyed particularly your article on foundation recipes and variations and will be eagerly looking for more."

VARYING IS TRICK

We are very glad you feel that way—it is our theory that a good cook does not need a large repertoire—she can rise to fame on a few excellent foundation recipes, varied as the occasion demands.

There are three main types of sauces—those made with milk, the familiar white sauce; those made with brown or beef stock and those with white or chicken stock. They are all made on the same underlying principles:—Melt two tablespoons of shortening, add two tablespoons of flour, (this is called a roux); stir together and cook over the heat at this stage so that there will not be a taste of raw starch to the finished sauce—this is most important. To perfectly season the sauce add salt and pepper, blending it in with the shortening; in this way it will permeate the sauce more evenly. Then add the one cup of cold liquid (milk, brown stock or white stock), gradually, stirring all the time and cook until the mixture comes to the boiling point; the constant stirring keeps the sauce smooth and velvety because, of course, a real sauce-maker scorns a strainer to remove lumps.

CHEESE SAUCE: Add three-quarters of a cup of grated cheese to the white sauce; stir until melted. Serve with fish, vegetables or egg dishes.

PIMENTO SAUCE: Add one-half cup of pimento to the white sauce. Serve with egg, fish or cheese dishes.

PARSLEY SAUCE: Add one tablespoon of finely chopped parsley to white sauce. Serve with potatoes, vegetables or fish.

SHRIMP SAUCE: Add one-half cup of shrimps to white sauce. Serve with omelet or white fish.

MUSHROOM SAUCE: Saute one cup of sliced mushrooms in the shortening. Add the flour and continue to make the sauce as directed above, using beef stock. Serve with roast beef, steak, croquettes or omelet.

SAUCE PIQUANTE: To the brown sauce add one tablespoon vinegar, one tablespoon capers, one tablespoon pickles, and a dash of cayenne. Serve with veal, beef or fish.

RUSSIAN SAUCE: Add to the brown sauce four tablespoons of heavy cream, two teaspoons of lemon juice. Serve with corned beef.

BECHAMEL SAUCE: Cook the one cup of chicken stock with one slice of onion, one small carrot, one-half inch piece of bay leaf, a sprig of parsley and six peppercorns, for 20 minutes. Strain and measure; there should be one-half cup. Add one-half cup of cream to the stock and continue to make the sauce as directed above. Serve with fried chicken, croquettes, veal cutlets or patties.

THE MARRY-GO-ROUND

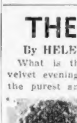
By HELEN ROWLAND

What is there about a red velvet evening gown that makes the purest and plainest woman feel so dashingly seductive and sophisticated that she gives you an impression of someone trying to imitate Greta Garbo, Jean Harlow or Mae West?



Helen Rowland

At twenty, a boy's most absorbing problem is how to make the women love him—at thirty, his most vital problem is how to make them STOP loving him.

Mrs. Solomon says: Go to Mae West, thou simple One. Consider her curves, and be wise. For the FRANKLY plump may enjoy the pleasure of the feast. But the way of the reducing-dieters is harder than a racketeer's conscience and more full of "sacrifices" than a January sale.

A woman gets worry-wrinkles by crossing every bridge before she comes to it; but a man keeps that beautiful serenity because he never even THINKS of crossing a bridge until he sees it being washed away. (That's why he is always so surprised when he is served with the divorce papers.)

A woman has not reached middle-age until she stops dressing alluringly to make the men want to kiss her and begins dressing stunningly to make the women want to choke her.

The average wife's greatest problem is not how to keep from spoiling her husband but how to keep him from spoiling HIMSELF.

A woman likes to be trusted by her women friends—but it gives her a shock to discover that she has reached the age where she is regarded as a perfectly safe chaperone for their Boy Friends.

Learn to Stipple

WOULD YOU LIKE to delve a bit into the secrets of the wall finishers who play pat-a-cake with your walls, and bring forth results that look like antique stone walls, adobe finishes, and sea foam? Some of the names for this work are "sponge stippling," "scumbling," "scatter blending," and "spatter finish."

A final coat of paint is applied with a sponge instead of a brush, in the sponge finish. Then the worker proceeds to tap with his sponge, pressing it against the wall rather hard and pulling it straight away without twisting the hand. Sometimes a wad of muslin, crepe paper, burlap or cheesecloth is used instead of the flat sponge, and the result all depends on how inspired your painter is!

Strawberries on Your Gown

FRUITY PRINTS, in luscious tones, natural or exaggerated, started with one of the French silk designers, and proved so lovely that we are scheduled to see all of the orchard products in spring and summer silks. At least it is a change from the idealizing of man-made machines, was originally guiding the designer, and bolts, spring and pistons inspiring him.

Strawberries, all natural, accompanied by their starry white blossoms and notched green leaves on a black background is the design of one of the original French prints. The colors are red, green, white and yellow. Cherries are a favorite, much used on navy blue grounds, with perhaps an added bunch of artificial cherries at the shoulder. And, yes, one of the designs distinctly was reminiscent of brussels sprouts, if you looked closely!

Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

It is depressing to others if you talk about a recent illness, operation or bad luck you have had. Why do it when there are so many other pleasant, interesting things to discuss?

Announcing an Engagement

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman: 1. I am planning to buy a complete linen set from one of the shops and I would like to know which is proper . . . to have the initial of the groom-to-be or my own initial on the linens?

2. My mother is planning to announce my engagement on a Sunday afternoon, an informal tea for my sorority sisters and a few other friends. May I have a few suggestions as to what we should serve and a novel way to make the announcement? The wedding date has not been set.

3. Is the groom-to-be to be present at any time during the afternoon?

E.

1. The best form, the most conventional and conservative form, is for the bride-to-be to use the initials of her maiden name on her linens and on her silver. But there is many a smart miss-to-be who do not follow this custom.

2. For this tea party you would have the usual tea table with delicate and delicious sandwiches, with tea and perhaps the alternative of coffee, and small cakes or layer cake or slices of fruit cake. Dishes of candies and nuts, too, are fitting.

I like best the idea of making the announcement in the simplest way . . . by wearing the ring for the first time on this occasion.

3. If you are inviting any other men, then, of course, your fiance would be included in the guest list. If the party is for girls only, usually the fiance doesn't come to the party, although he does appear for a few minutes at the end of the party.

Beauty Questions and Answers

Applying Rouge

Question: My face is very thin. How should I apply my rouge to make my cheeks look rounder? I enjoy reading your articles, and find many helpful suggestions.—Mary, Salem.

Answer: Since your face is thin, apply rouge rather far out and back on your cheeks, blending it forward faintly toward your nose.

No Home Treatment

Question: How can I remove a wart from my face? It looks so unattractive, and I'd like to get rid of it.—Mrs. D. C. S., Woburn.

Answer: I'm sorry, but I can suggest no home treatment for removing warts or making them smaller. It's best to let them alone, or else have them treated and removed by a reliable, reputable skin specialist or your physician.

When You Take Medicine Take It Seriously

Poisonous impurities accumulating in the intestinal tract, resulting from constipation, often cause sluggishness, headaches, loss of appetite, and nervousness. Any of these conditions may develop into a menace to your efficiency and physical well-being. Serious thought should be given to the elimination of the cause of these symptoms.

Dr. True's Elixir

Successfully used for 82 years the safe, effective laxative medicine for adults and children, made of imported herbs, pleasant to take . . . not a candy mixture . . . does not contain—never has contained phenolphthalein.

Eye Shadow

Question: I have blue eyes. What color eye shadow should I use? Thank you for any suggestions you can give me.—V. G., South Boston.

Answer: One of the many shades of blue would emphasize the color of your eyes. Or you might try matching the color of your frock or hat instead of your eyes.

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

I have a husband who is a dandy. And when I say dandy I mean he's a modern Beau Brummel in disguise. Now I'm so busy with the house work that I don't really have time to think of clothes, but does that stop him at all? Not one iota. Daily his sartorial splendor grows more magnificent. He wears bright tweeds, gay checks and beautiful flannels. In fact, Pandora, he IS the goods. It's got me rather worried, he's so jaunty looking all the time when people know how hard things are with us. His hat is perched on his head at an ultra rakish angle, and his ties! They not only knock your eye out, but they sort of thump it into the bargain. His cigar is always cocked at a slant that threatens the safety of his hat brim, and he smiles cheerily down the street with a stride that suggests the cock-of-the-walk. I know he doesn't feel that way inside, but what can I do?

LADY.

DEAR LADY:

I think you ought to realize that the whole thing is just a pose, but it's look behind the front. In these troublous times, when THAT corner is still a couple of blocks away, it takes more than a good cigar to keep a stiff upper lip. You know better than I the worries and cares he has. Let's be glad he's still got enough backbone left to care what people think, and to try to keep his and your spirits up. I think he's all wool and five skeins wide.

PANDORA.

Fire Chief to Appear Here Soon

AN OPEN LETTER TO GEORGE HOLLAND

(who, although a good host, doesn't seem to know any good hostesses in Boston)

My Dear George.

I can take my baked beans, or leave them alone, and the same goes for a column.

At the present moment I am ensconced in the private office of one Signor Angelo Lippi, to whom they attribute the success of the well-known Cocoanut Grove. I have witnessed a floor show par excellence, partaken of the best of foods and that with which you wash them down and I feel that there is nothing more that one can say (famous last words) except that I am thoroughly enjoying myself. I want you to know, George, that I appreciate all that I have seen, tasted, and . . . longed for.

Charlie King sings, Wilma Novak dances, Ranny Weeks and his boys play, people dance, and things happen. At least, I think things happen. After all, do I know? I'm writing to you Georgie. This I would like to say. I'm having fun. In other words, I've forgotten things theatrical, things etheral, things tangible . . . in other words, I've forgotten. Do you follow me, George? What I mean is this . . . I'm having fun. Do you think I sound like John P. Medbury? I mean, do you think I med like Sound J. Johnbury? What I mean is, do you think? In other words, where were me?

There goes a cymbal crash and an announcement. Maybe I'm on. In case you readers, (I mean you, George) don't understad theatrical parlance, "I'm on" means that an actor has to go to work. I like that word "parlance" . . . parlance, bedroom, and bath! This thing is getting further and further away from me, but do I know what I'm doing?

Look, George, to be serious for a minute, I've got some news. Remember me, the old Boston newsboy? I have it straight from the elbow (I could have said shoulder, but you know . . . the good old NRA) that Mr and Mrs Charles Coburn are returning to your glorious city in one of their better known melodramas . . . "The Yellow Jacket." Did you see it when you were a kid, George? I did, and nothing that Pearl White ever did in her palmiest days ever thrilled me more. In other words, kid, I'm giving you news! While I'm at it, and still able to see the keys, may I add that Bert Wheeler and Bob Woolsey, those two swell comics that jumped East from Hollywood for a couple of personal appearances were only sensational in Baltimore this week. They might have been wonderful, if your humble correspondent hadn't written their material.

I have heard it said that Norman Frescott, the mind reader with the "New Yorkers" at the RKO Keith's Boston this week is the talk of the town! In other words, everybody is wondering how he does it, and nobody knows! And are they burnt! All I can say is, if Walter Winchell can't figure it out, how do you expect to? Catch on? Ed. Note) Thanks" Wait a minute, here's the scoop of the year! A guy who not only should, but does know, just told me that Ed Wynn, (the So-o-o-o-o man in person) is scheduled for a personal appearance, with a terrific supporting company at the Boston Opera House sometime the latter part of February or early in March. If you miss this, you're merely a chump! I think the old man of the Fire House is simply gra-n-d! And, inasmuch as I've rambled on for days and days, forgive me if I sign off with Joe Smith and Charlie Dale's favorite crack . . . "with a hey nonney nonney, and A hot choc . . . olate!

Your's for bigger and better news commentators,

Ken Browne

P. S. I think that people have more fun than anybody except horses . . . they go to bed with their shoes on!

Ed Wynn

New Program

Another big film and stage program is offered by the Metropolitan for Friday. To the stage comes Lew Leslie's stage success, "Blackbirds of 1934," with the same cast that appeared in the show on Broadway. The settings and music are intact in this presentation of the pretentious all-Negro musical.

The screen attraction is "Fashions of 1934," with an all star cast.

Brilliant Spectacle in Historic Drama

Theater fans are being treated to a great spectacle drama on the Colonial stage this week as "Richard of Bordeaux" is enacted by a capable cast headed by Dennis King in a superb characterization of the English monarch of long ago.

Beauty a Drawback in Films, Says Hollywood Actress

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Clash of artistic temperaments is a main cause of Hollywood marital troubles, declares Anita Page. And just because of that, this star of screen and of surpassing beauty has made up her mind so she now avers, but a woman may change her mind, being a woman) that her choice of a husband shall be outside the acting profession.

The unusually attractive Anita is now one of the stars on the Met's stage. Her retinue is the most unusual of any star to visit Boston she travels with her entire family. That in itself is a novelty. There's Pa and there is Ma, and there is little brother and together they make the happiest backstage group imaginable. They know their New England do Marino L. Pomares that's Anita's real life last name) and family; before Anita entered films in the silent days (a mere chit of a girl) the family used to be in Boston twice a year, and they summered up in Maine. Now their permanent home is in Hollywood.

Let me tell you that Anita has looks (disturbingly beautiful, folks); and a keen sense of pantomime, plus the inner fire. Of her Marie Dressler said that of all the younger actresses, Anita, with proper handling, would become the greatest emotional actress.

"Beauty is a drawback in pictures," Anita is saying. "They want to type you down to parts according to looks, and it is awfully hard to break into emotional roles."

For the benefit of girls ambitious of motion picture careers Anita advises training in stock companies as the best preliminary. She is a great admirer of Marie Dressler and Polly Moran; and she played in three of Marie's big films. In all she has been in 45 movies.

For beauty hints she suggests plentiful use of good soap and water, first of all, fresh air exercise, and plenty of vegetables, raw and cooked, for food. That does seem pretty simple—if any woman wants those Venus lines and measurements that Anita has, this department suggests the use of the star's system.

There's something to that Venus thought for a great ... picked Anita as one of the ... most beautiful women in Hollywood ...

Best of ... however ... And she ... talents for ... pantomime and big expressive eyes bear eloquent accompaniment.

For fans' birthday books Anita confesses to 23 years with August 4 as the birthday.

For an unusual note it may be added (for those of artistic bent) that Anita sketches exquisitely and paints in both oils and water colors.

As a final note of general interest it may be added that recently a big producer at Hollywood singled her out as an exceptional screen personality to be given proper handling for mature development on the dramatic end.

Star Appears With Ben Bernie in "The Great Magoo," One of Paramount's Features

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1934, Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Jan. 31—Cary Grant and his physicians have promised that he will meet Ben Bernie at the Paramount studio February 19 to begin work on "The Great Magoo." Cary has already booked passage February 9 and the surprising part is that he will probably sail alone. His affianced bride, Virginia Cherrill, is making a picture in England and her mother says it's doubtful if she will be finished in time to return on the same boat with her prospective bridegroom.

Virginia sailed for England to spend Christmas with Cary Grant's father and to be married in London. She even obtained her marriage license. Then the bridegroom became seriously ill and spent most of his holiday in the hospital. So Mrs. Cherrill says unless there is a last minute change the marriage will be held in Hollywood.

The best-dressed man in Hollywood Adolphe Menjou, will forget his wardrobe and his screen reputation as a lady killer in Little Miss Marker. Adolphe plays the role of "sorrowful" aptly described by Damon Runyon as the bookmaker who takes care of a baby left him in payment of a debt. The baby is Cora Sue Collins and extremely important is that baby Dorothy Dell has the femme ... with Jack La Rue in an important role. Alexander Hall, who in a year's time has become one of Paramount's most distinguished directors, directs.

Two members of Sam Marx's scenario department, George Beton and Arthur Bloch, have developed a wow of a musical comedy story for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Under Sam's sponsorship they have written "Student Tour," which deals with a group of college students who go on a trip around the world and get into all sorts of difficulties. When I tell you Charles Butterworth will play the professor and Jimmy Durante, one of the students, you can see there will be plenty of comedy situations for Monta Bell, the director, to put on the screen.

With tests being made every day and new people signed for "Operator 13," the official starting date is some time this week. Because "Going Hollywood" is packing them in the theater and being retained for an additional week at Loew's State Theater Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is eager to get another Marion Davies picture on the market as quickly as possible. Like "Going Hollywood" "Operator 13" will have entertainment features. Larry Adler, young harmonica playing genius, has been signed. He is the lad who was given such a big hand at Grauman's Chinese. Meanwhile Marion is testing costumes and makeup each day at the studio.

Strenuous denials notwithstanding, close friends of William Seiter and Laura La Plante say she will obtain a divorce abroad. The Seiters cooled off more than a year ago although they remained the best of friends. Seiter ... that Miss La Plante will obtain her divorce to marry Irving Asher, hustling young producer who represents Warner Bros. here abroad. The La Plante-Asher rumor has been current since Irving was in Hollywood a month or so ago. Miss La Plante is now in Texas visiting a girl friend. She sails on the Ile de France February 2 to make a series of pictures for Warner Brothers abroad.

RONALD COLMAN had more fun at the WILLIAM HAWKS party with a magic magician. BILL POWELL said it was a fake but RONNIE insisted it had psychic powers all its own. Pretty VIRGINIA PEINE LEHMAN who was escorted to the HAWKS' party by MR. COLMAN, was on his side; also FAY WRAY. BESSIE LOVE HAWKS perfect hostess, was neutral. MRS. HOWARD HAWKS was skeptical so was JOHN MONK SAUNDERS. BING CROSBY, sitting with the football team, got a bigger hand than the team. CHARLIE CHAPLIN took his two sons to the Four Star Theater to see "Eskimo." HAROLD LLOYD, LUPE VELEZ and JOHNNY WEISSMULLER were in the same audience. LUPE and JOHNNY started a heated argument in front of the theater when LUPE insisted upon trying to buy one of the penguins on exhibition. HERBERT WILCOXON ... DE MILLE'S "Marc Antony" reaches here today. FREDRIC MARCH is expected home after spending a gra-a-and holiday in New York. AL HALL and LOLA LANE have decided to postpone their marriage until after ... the year. LAWRENCE GRAY, back from a stage engagement in the East, paying attention to IRENE BENTLEY. That's all today. # PROTESTS ROLL ON 'N. GAUGE' FARE RISE

City and town officials of four nearby communities affected by the proposed merger of the Narrow Gauge and Boston Elevated today started a concerted plan for a mass meeting to protest against any fare increase.

Chelsea Lynn Winthrop and Revere, warning branch points of civic organizations have served notice that would be refused and will not support the project if it means higher fares.

They plan to appeal the aid of Boston authorities in the protest.

Civic organization leaders said that although the proposed merger in itself is denied as a means of increasing commuting facilities officers of the two railroads apparently had succeeded to work out a plan whereby the project could be undertaken without burdening workers with increased fares.

Mayor Frederick Manning of Lynn pushing the fight against a fare increase said:

"Thousands of men and women employed in Boston are working on reduced salaries and part time. These would find a fare increase a burden they could not assume."

The mass meeting, for which preparations are being rapidly formulated, will probably be held on a scale that will make possible the attendance of thousands of men and women protesting the contemplated rate increase.

Residents of Greater Boston who while favoring the merger as a means of increasing traffic facilities do not favor the workers and residents of the four communities in the fare increase are being asked to sign the coupon printed in this page.

Send your protest direct to the Department of Public Utilities at the state house.

COURT TO RULE ON BAG WILL

One of the strangest testaments ever recorded in Suffolk probate court was filed in the will of John J. Mahoney, formerly a Boston fortune, which is written on a common brown paper bag.

The will was signed by 15 witnesses and left all the firemen's property, no money. The probate court will decide on its legality. It was sealed and read:

"I, John J. O'Donough, sign all my money over to my mother, city pension and all. I also give my wife $1, as I have not seen her for 10 years.

"They all know my mother (apparently referring to the 15 witnesses) and when she dies my money will go to my children as they have plenty at the present time.

"My mother first."

COLDS
When You Take The Right Thing!

A cold doesn't have to run its course and expose you to serious complications. A cold can be routed overnight if you go about it the right way. First of all, a cold being an internal infection, calls for internal treatment. Secondly, a cold calls for a COLD remedy and not for a "cure-all."

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is what a cold requires. It is expressly a cold remedy. It is internal and direct—and it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels, combats the cold germs and fever in the system, relieves the headache and grippy feeling and tones and fortifies the entire system. Anything less than that is taking chances with a cold. Get Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine at any druggist, 30c and 60c. Ask for it by the full name and beware of dealers who offer substitutes.

BOSTON MILK PROFITS OF $10,841,783 ARE BARED

Wallace Scores Local Dealers; Price Cut Is Seen Likely

Huge profits by milk distributors in New England were bared today by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace speaking at a "Home and Farm Week" convention in Madison, Wis.

Boston distributors handling 7? per cent of the total milk volume here, earned $10,841,783 total net profit on an investment of $48,2?3,?91, he said. This represented 22.? per cent profit.

Figures are those of government auditors gathered over a five-year period. "Excessive" officers salaries and bonuses, and "excessive depreciation and other such charges were eliminated.

OTHERS PROFIT MORE

Wallace declared he could not approve "having a few food distributing corporations among the first dozen in net earnings of all the nation's corporations throughout the depression, when agriculture has its back to the wall."

Profits by milk distributors in other cities compare and even exceed the Boston groups' profits, he said.

Wallace's revelations came just as Massachusetts' director of the Necessaries of Life Division, Ralph Robart, had declared the consumers could expect a drop in the prices of cream and milk by Friday if the AAA marketing agreement was not renewed by tonight.

His forecast was immediately spiked by the announcement at Washington that the present milk license for the Boston market would remain in full force until a new license was put into effect.

HIS "GUIDE" USELESS

Robart had based his expected drop in prices on the outcome of a "guide" he was preparing today to supersede the market agreement expiring tonight. If the license remains in effect, Robart's "guide" is without force.

This "guide," he explained, would be "a schedule for consumers and a list of prices at which they should be able to buy milk and cream, and at the same time it would assure the farmers fair prices for fluid milk and an increase for their surplus."

In his revelations of milk profits, Secy. Wallace declared that in 1933 alone, Boston distributors averaged 163 per cent profits on their investments.

He stated that the government's "determination to make future agreements between the producers and the AAA, and to license the distributors to enforce the agreements," was based on such huge profits.

TEACHERS MEET TO AID FUND CAMPAIGN

Campbell and Tobin Outline Plans to Aid Crusade

|---|---|
| Goal | $4,500,000.00 |
| To date | 1,600,119.82 |
| Still needed | 2,899,880.18 |
| Days to go | 19 |

The aid of school teachers is to be enlisted in putting over the Emergency Campaign of 1931, which today entered the second phase of the drive for $4,500,000.

At a meeting, in school committee headquarters this afternoon, the crusade will be outlined to the teachers by Chairman Maurice J. Tobin, of the school committee and Immigration Commissioner Mary Ward of the neighborhood committee of the campaign.

CAMPBELL OUTLINES PLAN

Supt. of Schools Patrick J. Campbell will also explain a plan which is designed to acquaint parents and pupils with the aim and object of the drive.

Supt. Campbell through the principals of the Boston schools, has notified all teachers of the need for personal contributions. Louis J. Fish, director of commercial education, will act as liaison officer between the school officials and the school committee.

In his letter to the principals, Supt. Campbell pointed to Mayor Mansfield's statement regarding the solicitation of funds by employers, and said:

"With this statement as a guide, you will bring the matter of personal contributions to the attention of your teachers and urge upon them the desirability of co-operating to the very fullest extent with the good people who are giving all their time to this splendid service. Let each teacher determine for himself what in conscience he should give, and let him give directly to the wards committees without any feeling of compulsion. The school committee does not wish any departmental solicitation and it does not desire that this circular should be regarded as a request, a wish or a demand."

$10,000 DONATION

With a total to date of $1,600,119.82, the Emergency Campaign, which has nearly three weeks to go, seems destined to meet with great success.

Yesterday's contributions were featured by a donation of $10,000 from Miss Grace M. Edwards and 10 others from $1000 up.

On Friday night Judge Frankland W. L. Miles of the Roxbury court will speak for the drive at an entertainment arranged by the Roxbury branch of the campaign committee in the Whittier st. health unit. Mrs. James Milmore will preside.

PORAZZO AGAIN IS PLACED AT DEATH SCENE

Second Witness Testifies He Saw Defendant at Club

A second witness today placed Nicholas Porazzo, on trial for the murder of "Big Mike" Richardi a year ago New Year's Day, in the Malden Social and Athletic Club Revere, the scene of the killing.

He was Donato Richardi, 19-year-old nephew of the slain man. Under cross-examination of Defense Atty. Joseph P. Walsh today he clung to his story that there could be no doubt that Porazzo was the man he saw in the club at the time of the alleged robbery and shooting.

To date, only one other witness Richardi's son, Daniel, has definitely placed Porazzo in the North Revere night club of Richardi, when death played the last act in the New Year's Eve entertainment.

Under cross-examination, young Richardi admitted he had not identified Porazzo in the Revere police station after the shooting, or in Chelsea district court.

Dominick Aiello, 19, of Pond st., South Braintree, testified Porazzo looked like a man he saw run through the club dining room with a gun in his hand.

Later he said Porazzo was the man, and when asked by Atty. Joseph P. Walsh if he had not previously expressed doubt, replied loudly: "Who told you that? I don't even know what it means. I didn't go to school long enough."

Lynn and Revere Shovels Earth -:- On $1,500,000 Bridge

Dots here linking Revere to the Northern Artery and Lynn will within a few months evolute into a $1,500,000 bridge, the first PWA project undertaken in Massachusetts. Work was started today on the new bridge, which will parallel the old structure across the Pines river. Bridge span shown at right marks the route of the Northern Artery.

Henry Lefavour, chairman of the Emergency PWA board in Massachusetts, turning the first shovel of earth in the construction of the bridge. Civic and political leaders witnessed the digging. The man with board, next to Mr. Lefavour, is James A. Crandall, president of the Crandall Construction Co., bridge builders. Next to him in derby hat is Mayor Casassa of Revere. Mayor Manning of Lynn also is in group, as are James A. Lockhart, Francis C. Gray, Frank Lenane, Thomas Jenkins, Charles V. Reynolds, Arthur P. Rice, Hall Nichols and Horace Crandall. ## CRITICS CHARGE JOB CANVASS IS WASTE

Defenders Cite Work for 3000 and State's Leadership

Boston CWA [illegible] and [illegible] reached [illegible] several [illegible] girls and women [illegible] temperature [illegible] for [illegible] a [illegible] for many [illegible] canvassers [illegible] to [illegible] today.

The reception given certain [illegible] housekeepers was [illegible] as the weather, chiefly because [illegible] interrogated didn't know what it was all about, while [illegible] a few resented answering certain questions on the printed questionnaire.

[illegible] complaints were telephoned to CWA [illegible] relative to [illegible] which [illegible] most of the [illegible]. Certain critics condemned the undertaking as [illegible] and "a waste of public funds."

COLD IS HANDICAP

Supporters of the census replied that anything that put 3000 women to work at this critical time was commendable. Defenders further argued the census was planned by federal authorities as a national movement and that Massachusetts is the first state to start it.

The project has encountered [illegible] since it was launched. It took more than a [illegible] federal red tape suf[illegible] to get authority to hire the army of census takers, while an office force of 150 [illegible] time waiting to tabulate returns. And then when the word was given Jack Frost raised a barrier.

In spite of the intense cold, however the census taking began yesterday in many sections of the city and the majority of the girls and women who braved the blasts did very well.

FORD GETS CASE

The health census is to be confined to Boston while in all other communities those out of jobs will be listed. The health questionnaire lists each member of the household who has been ill during the past six months, whether attended by physician, treated in a hospital, whether a chronic or temporary illness, duration and whether the patient is convalescent or has recovered.

It was reported at CWA headquarters, 4? Federal st. today that the case of Mrs. Isabella Kedian of Brighton, a CWA worker employed at 1?0 Nashua st., whose brother George McNamee, a Newton veteran, claimed she had to buy her job with her first week's pay had been turned over to U. S. Dist. Atty. Francis J. W. Ford.

WORK STARTS ON RIVER SPAN

Work began today on the first Public Works Administration project in Massachusetts, the new bridge over the Pines river between Lynn and Revere.

The first shovel of soil was turned this morning by Henry Lefavour, chairman of the emergency PWA board of the state before an assemblage of civic leaders.

The bridge will cost $1,500,000 to complete, according to present estimates, and it will provide jobs for approximately 200 men for a period of a year to a year and a half.

Among those who attended the ceremony were Mayor Andrew Casassa, of Revere; Thomas Jenkins, of Washington, now resident engineer, and James A. Crandall, president of the Crandall Construction Co., the firm that has the contract for the erection of the span.

Mayor J. Fred Manning, of Lynn, when asked why he had not attended, said he received no invitation.

The ceremony attracted a considerable crowd, largely because it meant the start of actual work on the first PWA project in the state.

[illegible] number of men will be put to work tomorrow, but, it was announced, the bulk of the jobs will be filled in five or sixe weeks when preliminary work is completed.

PLANET GAZING PLANT URGED

Establishment of a planetarium to cost $250,000 out of the income of the $6,000,000 George Robert White fund today was under consideration following a meeting of the trustees in the office of Mayor Mansfield.

The suggestion was made to the mayor and the board of trustees by Lieut.-Gen. Edward L. Logan, manager of the fund.

Furnace Blamed for Revere Blaze

An overheated furnace was said today to have caused the two-alarm fire, which caused $2000 damage to a three-story wooden dwelling in Arcadia st., Revere, and for a time threatened a number of cottages.

FIREMEN TEST MALDEN CUT

Ninety-eight separate petitions were filed in Malden district court late yesterday by Malden firemen appealing from Commr. Hannan's ruling that the 10 per cent reduction in firemen's pay is legal.

Malden firemen were surprised when they learned that the question to be decided by the court is only whether pay cuts were made according to law. The court, it was announced, will not consider Malden's ability to pay the old schedule.

Judge Lawrence G. Brooks of Medford has been assigned to hear the petitions and it is probable that the hearings will be held about the middle of February.

Mayor Devir of Malden has received pay cut agreements from almost every employe in all city departments with the exception of the firemen and a few policemen.

BEDROOM THIEF BACK IN CELL

"Jim, the Bedroom Burglar," went back to state prison today at the behest of Judge Raoul H. Beaudreau in Middlesex superior court and will have from four to six years to win back his membership in the prison council.

Otherwise known as James A. Thomas, 36, of Market st., Cambridge, colored, the prisoner was found guilty of breaking and entering the home of George G[illegible] in Cambridge, stealing a watch and $115.

Thomas, according to the testimony, specialized in reaching into bedroom windows and taking valuables within reach. When the judge was told that Thomas had been on the prison council in 1930 he said:

"I have no doubt he can fill that role."

Bartenders Honor Nine

Honorary life membership certificates have been sent by Boston Bartenders Union to nine prominent persons in recognition of their efforts toward repeal of the 18th Amendment.

Cyclist Injures Woman in Crash

Knocked down by a bicycle ridden by Warren Brown, a Back Bay lad, as she attempted to cross the intersection of Beacon st., and Winthrop rd., Brookline, Miss Muriel Sutherland of 82 Pond st., Natick, suffered serious injuries police reported today. Doctors of the Natick Hospital said Miss Sutherland may have received a skull fracture.

POLICE GRILLED IN CELL DEATH

Death of a 64-year-old man in a Back Bay police cell today brought questioning of the officer who arrested him and others on duty in the station, in addition to a charge of manslaughter against a cell mate of the man who died.

The victim was Joseph Flynn of St. Germain st., Back Bay, who died from injuries suffered after his arrest, according to police. The arresting officer was Patrolman Robert F. Howard, recently transferred from Fields Corner to Back Bay under the "less than five-year service" ruling of Commissioner Hultman.

Peter Janevas, 23, of Cabot st., Roxbury, cellmate of Flynn, was charged with manslaughter. He denied there had been a fight.

"If I ever laid hands on a man that age I'd be willing to go to the chair tomorrow," he told his questioners.

Statements of the arresting officer and others at the station were not revealed.

Levins Bill on Short Wave Auto Sets Is Fought

With three bills before it, all seeking to restrict the use of short wave radio receiving sets which might warn criminals of police activities, the legislative committee on public safety gave its attention today to a measure drafted by Rep. Martin J. Levine, of Boston.

The other two bills were submitted by Police Commissioner Eugene Hultman and by the Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Association. Chief Allen Rutherford, of Brookline, representing the association, agreed to give the Hultman bill the right of way and a hearing on it will be held next Wednesday.

The Levins bill, like the others, provides that only licensed persons shall be permitted the use of short wave radio sets in automobiles, and it would put this licensing power in the hands of a single person, preferably the head of the state police. Levins said too many permits would be issued if the matter were left to the discretion of the various local police heads.

Lieut. Martin W. Joyce, of the State Police, Chief Rutherford and Frank C. Gorman of the Radio Wholesaler's Club united in opposing the Levins bill as too loosely drawn. Gorman especially insisted that "short wave" was too broad a term and would wreck radio sales. He suggested a more definite limitation that would specify actual wave lengths barred to the public, and offered the services of his organization in drafting a law.

The Levins bill, like the others, would make unauthorized possession of a set capable of receiving police signals a misdemeanor. It leaves the penalty to the discretion of the legislature. The police chief have suggested this be a fine of not more than $500 and imprisonment for not more than six months.

Faunce Funeral Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services will be held at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning in the Church of the Sacred Heart at Roslindale for Mrs. Annie T. Faunce, 87, who died yesterday at the Roslindale home of her daughter, Mrs. P. J. Lynch, following a short illness. She is survived by Mrs. Lynch, a son and 17 grandchildren.

Lefavour Starts Work on Lynn Spa

With Chairman Henry Lefavour of the Massachusetts Public Works Commission scheduled to turn the first spadeful of earth, construction of the new Point of Pines bridge between Lynn and Saugus will begin at 10.30 o'clock this morning. The project, which is the first public works' job of importance under the NRA, will cost $1,400,000.

Harvard Adopts Tiger as Official Rat Catcher

Sarah has gone to Harvard.

And she doesn't give a whoop about the professors or their lectures or books. In fact, as soon as she gets used to the place she is going to spend most of her nights prowling and most of her days sleeping.

Harvard never had anyone quite like Sarah. Shakespeare leaves her cold; the fall of the Roman empire is just another one of those things, and quadratics merely make her yawn in the professor's face.

And nobody can expel Sarah. And if they did she'd come right back and make 'em like it. She's there and she's going to stay.

Sarah is a pretty tiger cat that wandered into the yard and has been officially adopted by the college.

Lynn Police Get Their Deer But It's a Merry Chase

The Lynn police force sat around headquarters this afternoon brushing up on hunting etiquette while waiting for new deer lessons.

Off in one corner a few men were learning to wind a hunter's horn. In another part of the room some others were practicing the proper way to serve a stirrup cup.

The reason for it all was that the Lynn police never again mean to be caught as unprepared as they were today, when a year-and-a-half-old buck was sighted in West Lynn.

Today's chase was entirely too unorthodox, all agree. It was better suited for a movie comedy than for the dignity of the police force.

It began when Sergt. Joseph Gannon and Patrolman George Kennedy started to follow the deer down the street in a squad car.

Then the buck began to cut across lots and back yards, taking fences and hedges in its stride.

The men ran into a few of the yards, the deer always ahead of them, and then took to their car again.

In that manner they covered two [illegible] and reached the Wyoma section. By this time two more cars and 18 more patrolmen had joined the chase with half of the men swinging lassos from running boards and getting themselves and everything else but the deer tangled [illegible] them.

The buck then doubled back, throwing the pursuit—now [illegible] by scores of civilians—into [illegible] kind of confusion. Then [illegible] dashed into the lot behind the Paramount theater in Union st.

Trying to get out of that tight spot the animal crashed into a brick wall. It was dazed for a moment and Irving S[illegible] and Harry [illegible]enbaum seized the opportunity to pounce on it. After 10 minutes of wrestling the buck's legs were tied and he was taken to the police garage to await a game warden.

Grahame looked [illegible] like of the girl. Of course he recognized her now. Janice Kent. Really, she was [illegible] more beautiful than her pictures showed her.

He observed [illegible] to the sidewalk [illegible] black one.

"Would you not [illegible] me home, Mr. Grahame," asked the girl softly.

The man from the [illegible] bill Grahame extended his hand and walked back toward his own car. Grahame got in beside the [illegible] few minutes later the car moved smoothly toward [illegible].

The girl pressed [illegible] eyes upon Grahame.

"Thank you . . . very much," she said.

Grahame [illegible] the street [illegible] shoulders and [illegible] was puzzled and [illegible] one more hint of [illegible] Janice Kent.

He said, "Miss Kent, did you notice any other men about the tan car. To me it seemed—"

"Yes," she answered quickly. "I did. The accident itself was curious. It was no coincidence. The tan car attempted to pass us. It pressed us into the curb. Yet, at that place, the street is wide. The man whom you struck was driving. There were others—two, I think—in the back seat. They were getting out when your cab turned the corner. I didn't see them again."

Grahame said quickly, "Did you recognize either of them."

"I don't know." She shrugged. "But no. It couldn't be he." She laughed a little. "He drives a much nicer automobile."

"Maybe his friends don't," replied Grahame, with a trace of grimness. "Who is he? When I talk to the police tomorrow, I'll tell them that we think the accident may have been planned. I can add a little to that story, perhaps. They'll question this man you think you saw. It should be easy for him to explain—"

"No, no!" Her voice held a shade of anxiety. "I'd rather you wouldn't. Indeed, it was probably my imagination. I talked with him today in Mr. Myberg's office. He is a gentleman from Central America—a Mr. Ortega—who is to make arrangements for the foreign scenes of my new picture."

Seated beside Janice Kent Grahame smiled a trace wistfully. Bill was a thousand fathoms deep in the Caribbean, or dead in some forgotten jungle, despite persistent newspaper rumors to the contrary. It needed a slight effort to bring himself back to the present. He said to the girl mildly:

"I'll say nothing about your Mr. Ortega."

him, Grahame caught sight of the reflection of his own grim face in the varnished surface. Anger boiled suddenly within him.

Grahame strode toward the phone. He dialed a number that was scrawled upon the telephone pad.

A maid answered the call. No, Miss Kent wasn't at home. Oh, Mr. Grahame? Would he wait a moment, please?

A breathless voice finally answered.

"This is the maid speaking again, Mr. Grahame." Her voice sounded curiously disturbed. "Miss Kent isn't at home. No, no. Don't misunderstand me. She thought you would call, and was waiting. But when I went to her room she was gone! Hello! Hello! Are you still there, Mr. Grahame? . . ."

Grahame interrupted, "I'll come right out." He hung up the receiver. He waited a moment and savagely dialed a number.

"Hello, Spin? Say, Spin, get over here, instantly. What's that? Forget it. This is serious. Just talked with Janice Kent's maid. Janice is gone, yes, yes. Disappeared. Hurry!"

As he stepped from the doorway of his apartment house into the street, headlights flashed upon him. Winslow, in his blue roadster, had arrived.

The maid said with a trace of sullenness in her voice

"I tell you Miss Kent always tells me where she will be. There may be studio calls, you know.

"She expected your call. She said—if you phoned within the next half hour—to tell you she expected to have dinner with you. Otherwise she'd talk with you herself."

Grahame said, surprised, "Well, what—"

"No—" A strange voice spoke from the doorway. "We will not notify the police . . . not yet."

They turned. A man stood at the door. His head was round and bald, and sat upon his shoulders like an orange on a box there seemed to be no neck. His figure was short and burly, and clad in black.

Greene called effusively, "Mister Myberg. How glad I am you're here. Now we may—"

Myberg a obsidian eyes flickered. Their glance interrupted Greene as a blow would have.

"Greene," said the chief executive of the Consolidated, "this is not one of your monkeyshines!"

Greene opened his mouth to protest. Winslow waved him to silence.

The newcomer asked to be told what had happened and what they knew.

He listened, frowning at the carpet. Finally, he asked "Who [illegible] this man?" His [illegible] gesturing vaguely

"Frank Grahame."

"Oh, the jungle man, eh?" Grahame was favored with a swift glance. "You get people out of troubles, eh? All right. You get Janice out of this mess she is [illegible] in, and I hire you. I hire you for the new picture. I pay you—" He pursed his lips and stared at the ceiling. He took out a small black notebook and tore a sheet from it. Carefully he uncapped his fountain pen and scribbled something on the paper. He handed it to Grahame.

Grahame with some astonishment took the paper. He glanced at it.

"The salary seems sufficient," he said somewhat stiffly. "But does this seem the time to—"

"Any time is all right to talk business," said the man in black. He straightened his shoulders. "You call up that feller Ortega, and ask him what he knows." As he turned through the door, he called over his shoulder:

"Grahame . . . That figure on the paper is for the week, not the month." He disappeared through the doorway.

Grahame gestured impatiently "He said call up Ortega. Good idea. Know his number?"

Paula went sullenly to the phone on the night-stand next to the bed.

There was a slight delay and she held the receiver toward Winslow. "It's his hotel," she said.

Grahame said, "Give me that." He took the receiver.

"I want to speak to Mr. Ortega. What? . . . He's left? You mean he's [illegible] checked out? When? time?" For the space of a minute or two he listened attentively . . . "Oh, all right . . ." He put the receiver back upon its stand.

"Easy to trace," commented Winslow. "We can know where Ortega went in five minutes,—if the cab is [illegible]."

He took up the phone and got the hotel on the wire again. Asking his question, he seated himself on the bed; he crossed his legs and snapped a light to a cigarette.

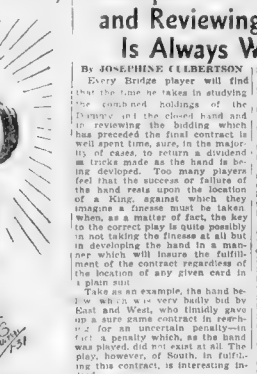
Time Spent on Studying Dummy and Reviewing the Bidding Is Always Worth While

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Every Bridge player will find that the time he takes in studying the combined holdings of the Dummy and the closed hand and in reviewing the bidding which has preceded the final contract is well spent time, sure, in the majority of cases, to return a dividend in tricks made as the hand is being developed. Too many players feel that the success or failure of the hand rests upon the location of a King, against which they imagine a finesse must be taken when, as a matter of fact, the key to the correct play is quite possibly in not taking the finesse at all but in developing the hand in a manner which will insure the fulfillment of the contract regardless of the location of any given card in a plain suit.

Take as an example, the hand below which was very badly bid by East and West, who timidly gave up a sure game contract in reaching for an uncertain penalty—in fact a penalty which, as the hand was played, did not exist at all. The play, however, of South, in fulfilling this contract, is interesting indeed.

South, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1♡ | Pass | 1♠ (1) | 2♡ Pass (2) |
| 4♡ (3) | Pass | (4) Pass | Pass |

(1) West should double rather than merely overcall. This is the first mistake in the bidding.

(2) While East has some help for his partner's bid he feels that a free Raise at this point would show too much strength—hence the pass.

(3) South, of course, is fully justified in bidding for game.

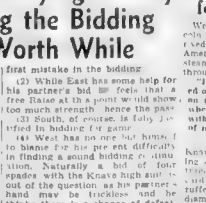
(4) West has no one but himself to blame for his present difficulty in finding a sound bidding continuation. Naturally a bid of four spades with the Knave high suit is out of the question as his partner's hand may be trickless and he thinks there is a chance of defeating the adverse contract.

West's Opening lead was the club King, and when the Dummy was spread on the table the Declarer could see a possibility of losing one spade and three diamonds. If the King of spades was in the West hand, which had bid the suit, and the Ace of diamonds in the East hand five odd could be made. However, South was not interested in overtricks but in a surely fulfilled contract. The first trick was won with the Ace of clubs and a heart led which was taken with the Ten in Dummy. A club was returned and ruffed in the closed hand and a small spade led and the finesse refused. Dummy's last club was then led and ruffed in the closed hand and South now returned the last spade. East won and returned a diamond but the contract was now absolutely safe. West won with the [illegible] and returned a spade, hoping against hope the Declarer had three spades. A diamond was discarded in Dummy, and the spade ruffed in the closed hand, one more diamond trick conceded and the contract thereby fulfilled.

Tomorrow's Hand

South is the Declarer at a contract of four spades. How can he make his contract against the Opening lead of the diamond Queen?

East, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Francis Ouimet Back to Zero Weather From Florida Revel

Boston's Distinguished Golfer Shot a 68 on Indian Creek Course

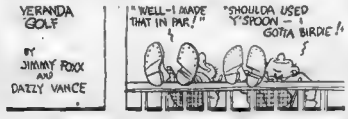
By AUSTEN LAKE

After a month's revelry in Miami's gaudy hotel colony, where gents traipse around in bloomers and gals slouch in silky slacks, Francis Ouimet, the distinguished golfer, is home again to listen some more to the clucking of his stock ticker. His skin is veneered a soft mahogany shade, one of the earliest sunburns to be displayed hereabouts, and he is telling about a 68 that he shot on the Indian Creek course, which is not so much a golf links as a pernicious sequence of fairways, the width of a bowling alley, and pitted with craters, shell holes, cellar excavations and machine gun emplacements.

In fact to shoot a 68 at Indian River, with its gooseneck approaches and handkerchief greens, you virtually have to wish your ball around, conceding all putts of less than mashie pitch distance and being philosophical about free lifts. I am talking from the angle of a golfing sucker who years ago, mowed the tufts of saw grass on the edges of Indian Creek's fairways and sometimes fished in the palmetto groves and weedy marshes that are rough to the golfer but home to the cotton mouths and other venemous reptiles of the region.

You do not, as a rule, fish for lost balls on Florida courses nor waste regrets for the little white ball that curves into the scrub toothpick pines, because you never know what might be coiled under a sprig of marsh grass. And I have seen vacationing ball players, like Dazzy Vance and Jimmy Foxx, sit on the shaded veranda of the clubhouse and play an imaginary two-some, so that Jimmy would say "With my normal tee shot I could carry the ditch at the fifth, and put my iron on the green. I would give myself two putts for a par." And Dazzy, with his feet on the rail, would promptly halve the hole, and sometimes surprise Jimmy by holing out a dream brassie shot for an eagle.



It was interesting, too, to watch these two when they were actually playing, because Jimmy with his tremendous power, would often shoot across lots, skimming a woodsy copse and sometimes landing his tee shot on a par-5 green, a cause of much bickering from Vance, whose method of stroking a ball was an exasperated slap, and which would set him to jabbering and tearing his clothes.

Once every so often, Dazzy would hit a rocket drive that split the fairway for 300 yards, or make a miraculous recovery from the rocks and the deep tangled wildwood and then remark that even Sarazen never hit a better one in any open championship. "I tagged that right on the nerve center," Dazzy would say, a new light of ambition in his mild, blue eye. Which explains the goofy obsession that goes by the name of golf, that to us suckers consists of an eternal search for the sweet spot which lies mysteriously somewhere in the clubhead.

Ball Players and Golfers Never Forget

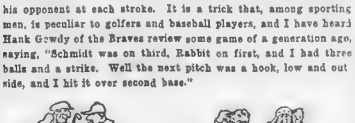
"My drive was in the rough on the eighth," related Francis this morning, snatching out the ticker ribbon and reading the initials as they came out of the stuttering glass beehive. And without taxing his memory he related his progress, stroke by stroke, over the Indian Creek course. For golfers have a curious faculty for revisioning old performances, lifting them at will from the loose-leaf record that they keep in their mental files, so that Ouimet can describe the sequence of his shots in some 10-year-old tournament, even to describing the ball's lie and the position of his opponent at each stroke. It is a trick that, among sporting men, is peculiar to golfers and baseball players, and I have heard Hank Gowdy of the Braves review some game of a generation ago, saying, "Schmidt was on third, Rabbit on first, and I had three balls and a strike. Well the next pitch was a hook, low and out side, and I hit it over second base."



I have never noticed this faculty among hockey, football or track men, who have only vague memories of old games. And Eddie Shore, for one, has a hard time to recall the names of the men who inflicted the wounds that patchwork his body and head in the form of white, spidery scars, and he will tell you vaguely that a certain forehead scar happened in Montreal, either by skate or stick, and he thinks that it was, maybe, in 1929 . . . no, let's see, must have been earlier. I have never known a football player who could tell you more than two consecutive plays of a game that has happened only last Saturday, and then only when they were sensational heroics in which an end snagged a long pass and immediately afterward a back galloped off tackle for a touchdown.

It explains, too, why golf and baseball are two of the world's greatest talking games, and why golfers and ball players will in their several turns, sit and yawp by the hour on ancient miracles, giving all the sordid details. It is something of an earful, I assure you, to get a group of golfing ball players on the front hotel stoop during the evening.

"I caught a heel print with my second shot on the tenth," continued Ouimet, snaking out another yard of ticker tape.

HOLY CROSS ANNOUNCES '34 SLATE

Worcester, Jan. 31—Nine rugged games complete the Holy Cross varsity football schedule for 1934, which was announced today by Tom McCabe, athletic director for the Purple. Few college varsities will have to play at such high pitch all season, and not for years has Holy Cross had such a tough assignment to face.

The season will open at Fitton Field on Sept. 29 when Loyola College from Baltimore will furnish the opposition, and it will close on December 1 with the climactic game against Boston College at University Heights in Newton. November 24 has been left purposely open so that the Crusaders can have a chance to meet Boston College when at their peak.

WIT HARVARD OCT. 20

Following Loyola to Fitton Field comes Providence on October 6 then the powerful Catholic University team on October 13. The annual clash with Harvard will take place in the Stadium on October 20.

For the first time in modern football history, Colgate's hid Red Raiders come to Worcester and the meeting should be the peak of the Crusader season at home. This game will pack Fitton Field on October 27. More than 100 tickets have already been applied for, and a sell-out is anticipated.

On November 3 there will be a visit to Temple in Philadelphia. Holy Cross, by the way, will have Philadelphia to itself on this date as the Boston College visit to Villanova on that day has been transferred to Boston.

November 10 the Holy Cross varsity will play its annual game with Manhattan in New York. Then comes the game with Brown at Providence on November 17, with the windup at Boston College on December 1.

LOYOLA GOOD TEST

Recalling that Tony Comerford brought a Loyola team to Fitton Field two years ago and only a last-minute rally gave Holy Cross a narrow 18 to 14 margin over the Grayhounds makes the Crusaders start the season on high. Loyola will be quite a match for Holy Cross for it has a number of ex-Greater Boston products in its lineup.

Considering that Providence, Cathe. U., Harvard, Colgate, Temple, Manhattan and Brown are to be met on successive Saturdays, a successful outcome will entitle Holy Cross to sectional honors.

John "Muggsy" Kelley, formerly a Cambridge Latin ace and now of Kent's Hill school, today was named as one of the eight Greater Boston boys who may have a trial with the Harrisburg team. The latter club is a Braves farm. Mayhap one of the eight will become a real big leaguer. Two other boys may go to St. Petersburg. All were given the opportunity by Judge Emil Fuchs of the Tribe. The judge co-operated with the Boston American in its big contest. In this contest hundreds of fans nominated their favorite baseball players. Now the nominees will seek fame and fortune.

LONDOS MEETS SAVOLDI AGAIN

Chicago, Jan. 31 (AP)—Jim Londos, most persistent of the heavyweight wrestling claimants, and Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame fullback, will meet tonight in the Chicago Stadium ring to finish something they started ten months ago.

On the occasion of their former meeting, which was billed as for the world championship, Savoldi won a fall and a match in 26 ½ [illegible]

Tonight's engagement is billed as a championship event, but the commission neither has approved nor disapproved the billing. It has however decided that there shall be a winner. If neither gladiator has achieved a fall at the end of 90 minutes, the time limit, the referee and two judges will render a decision.

Championship or no championship, advance sales indicate that no less than 15,000 spectators will be there to watch and listen.

Ring Bill Filed to Fine Non-Licensed Pilots

A figurative three-cornered boxing exhibition took place today at a hearing before the legislative committee on public safety over a bill to fine managers of boxers who are no licensed by the state.

The debate was participated in by Boxing Commissioner "Dan" Kelly, Rep. Hyman Manevitch of Boston, featherweight boxer with the A E F, and Senator Edward C Carroll of South Boston, [illegible] heavyweight champion in 1915.

Kelly, in favoring the b[illegible] something must be done to get at "bootleg managers," all of them out-of-staters, with whom the commission has had considerable trouble. He said there is no comparison on the managers licensed by the state.

It was brought out that there is no penalty now against the "bootleg managers," other than suspending the boxer until he fulfills the engagement for which he was originally booked by the out-of-state manager.

Senator Carroll raised the question about a "third party" who might be delegated to represent the "bootleg manager." Kelley said where the third party is a licensed manager of this state the story is different. What the commission wants to do, he said, is to end the activities of the out-of-stater, booking engagements and then failing to go through.

Manevitch fired a number of questions at Kelley, incidentally mentioning his own pugilistic endeavors, in one of which he boxed [illegible]

Arrangements are being completed for the second game to be played between the Maple Leafs and an all star team [illegible] Conacher, president of the board of governors of the National Hockey League, was here today to arrange the details. The entire proceeds of the game are to be given Bailey.

O'BRIEN TROPHY FOR H-Y RACE

Boston and New York friends of Francis J. O'Brien, Harvard '14, and for three years end on the Crimson football teams, announced today that a silver trophy representing the figure of a runner in full stride will be donated to the winner of the Harvard-Yale relay race of the annual H A A games.

O'Brien, who died a year ago, was a c[illegible]ss mate of Pres. James Bryant Conant of Harvard. He had previously attended Roxbury Latin School.

Members of the Lipton League and Blagdon Bulls are backers of the O'Brien trophy movement. The trophy will become the permanent possession of the Harvard or Yale team which wins the first five legs.

14,000 HOWLING FANS WELCOME EDDIE SHORE AT GARDEN

BRUINS BACK IN WINNING STRIDE

By BILL GRIMES

Eddie Shore furnished the spark that fired the Bruins to snap out of their prolonged—and probably fatal—slump last night at the Garden. During the first period Babe Siebert and Joe Lamb flipped a couple of shots by Andy Aitkenhead and by playing defensive hockey whenever the Rangers turned on the "heat," Boston came through with a 2 to 1 victory. Butch Keeling scored for Rangers early in the second period.

Eddie Shore was the cynosure of 14,000 pair of eyes. He was given the greatest ovation in the history of hockey when he skated on the ice for his preliminary warm up. For the first time this season the demand for Bruin tickets exceeded the supply. It was like old times.

On the basis of his playing last night, Eddie Shore will require a few more games before he returns to his old-time form. Although he worked out daily for a fortnight before he returned to the Boston lineup in New York, Eddie's timing was off and he was nervous.

MAY DUCK DETROIT

After the Western trip, which the Bruins start today, Eddie will be himself, if he is played in Detroit and Chicago. There is a rumor to the effect that Shore will not play against Detroit, because James Norris, Sr., owner of the Red Wings, voted with Conn Smythe, in the recent N. H. L. meeting.

In the event that Eddie is allowed to play in Detroit, the shortsighted publicity will react against him, as it did when he needs the support of the fans.

Despite the fact that the Bruins conquered the Rangers, they are still ten points, or five full games out of third place. The Red Wings lost second place last night by beating Ottawa 2 to 0, the Chicago Blackhawks went into a first place tie with Rangers. Individually Paul Thompson figured in both of the Hawks' scoring plays. That young Thompson boy is certainly keeping the Hawks in the running.

The Bruins have played better hockey and not than that which brought them through to a victory last night. They jumped the Blue Shirt in the opening stanza and managed to retain a one goal advantage.

The Rangers were spotty. Only on rare occasions did they bear down. They are at the top of the heap and therefore defeat did not seriously affect their standing in the race for one of the three American Division playoff positions.

On the few times that they resorted to serious play, the Rangers gave the most sensational exhibition of puck handling ever seen in this or any other hockey orchard. They fished the puck around in a most nonchalant manner and put some equally sensational real mind-ing on the part of Tiny Thomson, would have scored enough goals to win a dozen games

BRUINS DROP 2 PLAYERS

Before the game, it was announced that Lloyd Gross and George Patterson were to be dropped to the Cubs and will accompany Manager Lionel Hitchman to Philadelphia today.

As matters now stand the Bruins were weakened to the extent of Art Chapman and Bob Gracie as a result of that trade with Americans. Gross and Patterson may help to make the grade with the Bruins but Chapman and Gracie have caught the fancy of Manager Jack Simpson of Americans.

To replace Gross and Patterson, the Bruins have Frank Jarwa and Bob Davie from the Cubs. Jarwa and Davie started the season with the Bruins but they were sent back to the Can-Am League, for lack of talent and experience. Just how much they have improved under Coach Joe Gilmore and Manager Myles Lane remains to be seen.

Now that the Bruins are at top strength, they should win one of some consequence. They have been shuffled around so much and there have been so many rumored deals and releases that the Bruins have been under considerable mental strain. They are all-or, at least, most of them, listening for the rattle of the cup that announces their departure to some other outfit.

Under such conditions it is not to be wondered that they have only won five points out of the last 36. But, now that they are again at new strength, if they fail to deliver, it will be up to somebody, other than the players, to account for the failure.

The Bruins tackle the Red Wings tomorrow night in Detroit and another defeat will drop them back two more points, in the event of Rangers and Chicago losing to Toronto and Canada, respectively. They are scheduled for a Sunday night engagement with the Blackhawks in Chicago before they return to the Garden for Americans.

Chute and Smith on Iramerk Card

The Irish American A. A. will conduct its weekly handball tournament tomorrow night at its headquarters, 230 Broadway, South Boston. The heavyweight class will be one of the feature events of the evening, with stars like Paul Chute, Boston; Edward Smith, Watertown; William Demargio the 225-pound fighting milkman from Norwood, and Charlie Beiforti, Wellesley, who lost a close decision to Paul Chute Monday night at the Boston Arena, all have entered the heavyweight class.

BOSTON WOMEN LOSE IN BRITAIN

London, Jan. 31 (AP)—The Jesters Club team of men amateur racquets players today gave the visiting United States women a team liberal handicaps and defeated them seven matches to none. It was the second defeat in three starts for the invaders.

The men players gave a handicap of four points, two hands each game to the women, and several interesting and closely contested matches were played.

NAME ELI GRID COACH TONIGHT

New Haven, Ct., Jan. 31 (AP)—Final decision on the Yale football coaching tangle appeared imminent today after weeks of suspense and speculation.

The spokesman for the athletic association announced that the board of control had tentatively set 8 o'clock tonight for its meeting at which time the recommendations of Malcolm Farmer, athletic director

"But there may be a hitch," the spokesman added, as he suggested the possibility that the decisive session might be called off at the last minute.

Just what the hitch might be he did not say. He did he indicate what Farmer's recommendations would be although reports persisted that Raymond (Ducky) Dowd, who waded through the mud in 1923 and 1924 to beat Harvard, would be chosen as head coach to succeed Reginald Root.

Earle (Greasy) Neale of West Virginia apparently was slated for the post of backfield coach and Bennie Oosterban of Michigan was virtually conceded the job of end coach.

Farmer was also expected to recommend a new line coach but his identity remained a secret

Maranville Needs 139 Games to Break Wagner's Record

Pittsburgh, Jan. 31 (AP)—A National League record that old Honus Wagner has held for 18 years is in danger of being eclipsed this year if Rabbit (Goes-on-Forever) Maranville's aging, but elastic legs carry him through another full season.

Wagner, the "Flying Dutchman" of Pittsburgh Pirate fame, in 21 years of active diamond warfare, set a mark of participating in 2733 games by the time of his retirement in 1916. He is now a Pirate coach.

No other national leaguer has come near that figure, but year by year the Boston Braves shortstop, now 42 years old, has been creeping up and by playing in 143 contests last season he reached a total of 2647 for 22 seasons

Since the mighty rabbit can pass the old pirate shortstop's record by playing in 139 frays this year More than once he has said it's his ambition to set up a new total games mark.

If Maranville does break the national league record, he still has the all-major league goal ahead of him—the 3,033 figure set by Ty Cobb in the American.

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

After receiving a 2 to 1 award over the Rangers last night at the Garden, the Bruins are in a better frame of mind for their third and final swing around the western circuit, which they start today. Despite their victory over the Blue Shirts, the Bruins are still ten points back of the Red Wings, who slipped back into third place by virtue of an off night and Chicago's win over Ottawa.

Eddie Shore returned to action at the Garden last night and received a wonderful ovation from a capacity crowd of 14,000 fans. It was Eddie Shore night. He was responsible for the crowd—the largest of the season—and was paid a wonderful tribute

On the west end of the Garden there were two banners with "Welcome Home, Eddie Shore." The fans cheered Shore's every movement, and when he was stunned for a moment by a collision with Earl Seibert, a hush hung over the Garden.

The Bruins underwent another shakeup last night. Lloyd Gross and George Patterson, who figured in the Art Chapman, Bob Gracie deal, were dropped to the Cubs and Frank Jerwa and Bob Davie promoted to the varsity.

Tommy Filmore, who is in Detroit, will join the Bruins tomorrow night and play against the Red Wings. Filmore's wife was operated upon yesterday and Tommy left here Monday night

Some fan brought a siren to the Garden last night and how he did whirl it when Eddie Shore started one of his old time rushes.

Perk Galbraith has been appointed official Bruin scout. He will leave today to look for big league prospects in the Central and American Leagues. And Joe Bretto, the giant from Minneapolis, is listed to play with the Cubs.

Myles Lane and Archie Wilcox were the only Bruins defense men who displayed an inclination to step into Rangers last night. Incidentally, it has come to a fine pass when fans box American here players as they did Myles Lane and cheer at the announcement of a Canadian.

Never in the annals of hockey has there been a more clever passing outfit than the New York Rangers. How those Blue Shirts can handle that puck. And, when they wanted to let out last night they gave the greatest exhibition of "puck puck, who got the puck," ever seen at the Garden.

Eddie Burke, who was the property of the Bruins, played an important role in the Americans' 3 to 2 victory over the Toronto last night in New York. The round Eddie scored the tying goal in the second period and then passed to "Rabbit" McVeigh for the winning tally. The second Americ goal was scored by Art Chapman, who has come to life since he was transferred to Gotham

Frank Burke, the well known candy man, returned from Toronto yesterday and reports that "Ace" Bailey is making a wonderful recovery. "Ace" walks a mile and a half each day and will leave for Brockbridge in about a fortnight. He attempted to drive his automobile last week but was obliged to relinquish the wheel to Mrs. Bailey.

On their way to the Bruin-Ranger game from Providence, Bob Taylor and Hugo Harrington were in an auto accident but fortunately neither was injured.

After playing on the defense for Chicago and Americans, Duke Dutkowski has been converted into a center by Lester Patrick. And he looks too tough in his new position.

AGUA CALIENTE OPEN STARTS

Agua Caliente, Mex., Jan. 31 (INS)—The big parade of winter golf moved into Mexico today

The annual Agua Caliente open tournament, carrying a purse of $7500 and drawing a field of nearly 200 of the finest golfers of East and West, was to start today. First prize is $1500.

In the first round tournament officials, headed by W. C. Fields the chairman of the tournament committee, set a precedent in pairing amateurs with amateurs and professionals with professionals. The mixing will come after the amateurs have proved themselves

First of the "gallery threesomes" scheduled to get away today was that composed of Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., last year's winner; Joe Kirkwood, the Australian trick shot master; and Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., who tied Denny Shute, of Philadelphia, for first place in the British open championship last spring

These three were to be followed by the "big shot" threesome, Shute paired with Lee Diegel, Philadelphia, outstanding attraction in Mexico, and Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond, Va.

Jack Rose, Boston, vs. Mike Persinian, New York. (One fall to win—10-minute time limits.)

Ted Tonneman of Chicago has been named to referee the finish mat bout between Charley Strack and Al Mercier at an Alex MacLean show at the Arena tonight Best two falls out of three will decide the tussle

Strack and Mercier have already met twice. Strack won both contests. In the first tussle, the referee gave the breaks to Charley while in the second contest Dutch Luck rode with the big, bad wolf of the mat game.

Mercier says that with Tonneman on the job tonight he will receive a square deal, and that he will leave the ring the winner. Mercier is a more skilful wrestler than Strack, but the latter has always had the edge in rough house meetings

Strack and Mercier are in excellent condition, and it is expected the big fellows will set a furious pace from the start Strack rules as 5 to 4 favorite, but the "Flying Frenchman" has plenty of backing

Strack's title as New England heavyweight champion will be at stake. He has put up his belt with Alex MacLean. The big fellows are also making a side bet of $500.

Miller Favorite

New York, Jan. 31 (AP)—Fredie Miller, of Cincinnati, National Boxing Association featherweight champion, was a heavy favorite to whip Frankie (Kid) Covelli of New York in their ten-round non-title match at the Broadway arena tonight.

Hafey Admits Turning Down Cincinnati Managership

Oakland, Cal., Jan. 31 (INS)—Chick Hafey, star outfielder of the Cincinnati Reds, admitted today he had turned down the manager's job of the Reds because "it's too long a walk from the outfield to the bench."

"A playing outfielder is at a distinct disadvantage managing a ball club," he said. "He is too far away from the actual play.

PURPLE-EAGLE RELAYS MEET AT B.A.A.

By WALTER KILEY

Boston College and Holy Cross one mile relay teams renew their Jesuit college competition over Boston Garden boards on the occasion of the B. A. A. games on the night of Feb. 10

Both produced fast times at the recent Prout Memorial games. Holy Cross expirenced little difficult- Defeating Harvard's varsity quartet in the fastest time of the evening, 3 mins. 27 2-5 seconds

Boston College was well on the way towards victory against New York University when Dana Smith running a strong anchor, tripped as he made a bid to pass Harry Hoffman on the last lap The Violet was timed in 3 min 28 3-5 sec. and undoubtedly the time would have been even faster only for the unfortunate spill which ruined the final drive

TO SHIFT LINEUP

Jack Ryder, Eagles' coach, expects to shift his lineup somewhat for the Unicorn feature.

He will select his four men from the best time trials, to be held during the next ten days at University Heights

Johnny McManus, John Joyce, Bill Parks Joe O'Leary, Dana Smith, and O'Laughlin are all in the running. Smith will continue to run the anchor leg on the strength of his recent fine performance

The Eagles will be represented in both relay and individual events. Ryder will send his freshman quartet against six other picked fours in the Intercollegiate one mile event and the B. C. two-mile team which is running in the Millrose games at New York on Saturday night will again face the starters gun in the intercollegiate varsity relay championship

Pawtucketite and Heffernan in the Briggs 30-yard dash, Neil Holland and Ernest Goglia in the 45 yards hurdles, Eddie Conley in the Williams two-mile run and Connors and Hayes in the high jump will attempt to cop the Macroon and Gold colors to victory

Ray Thompson, Bates' coach, sends along word that the Maine college match has previously won several B. A. A. relay events, has another fine team in the making and will be much in the running next week.

CUNNINGHAM IN MILF

Among Bates' outstanding performers are Charlie Thurlkill, former Boston Latin and Worcester Academy star half miler, one of the best middle distance runners ever produced in Greater Boston and Bob Saunders

Ammerman and Bill Malley.

One of the best bits of news of all is that Glenn Cunningham, America's best miler, will make his first appearance in Boston competition.

Cunningham recently was awarded the 1933 James E. Sullivan Memorial Medal as being the outstanding athlete of the past season.

The Kansan will face an even better mile than took the post in the Curley mile last Saturday.

He raced the distance in 4.12 indoors last winter, his best indoor 1500 meter time up with a 4 mins. 9 8-10 mile in the National Collegiate outdoor mile at Chicago He is also National A. A. U. 800 and 1500 meter champion, winning the former in 1 min. 51.9 sec. and the 1500 meter in 3 mins. 52.3 secs. at Chicago. last July.

Mr. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

JOE (TOOTS) MONDT pressed his rather large nose against the canvas at the edge of the ring at the Boston Garden. Earl McCready was wrestling Casey Kazanjian.

Mondt looked as grim and determined as he did when he battled Strangler Lewis for the heavyweight championship of the world

"What is it Toots?" asked as I dropped into a chair beside the former mat star who has turned promoter.

"You are looking at the coming heavyweight wrestling champion of the world," said Toots "I'm serious. I mean Mc-Cready. He's the best of the younger crop of wrestlers. The fellow has everything and the finish that makes a champion will come with experience."

Mr. Boston

McCready stepped to close quarters and punished Kazanjian with arm and leg locks. When he weakened Casey sufficiently, he went to long range. McCready suddenly leaped in the air, threw his powerful legs around his opponent's body and dropped him to the canvas for a fall

"The next champion" said Toots. "A year from now McCready will be unbeatable."

It was later announced that McCready would meet Ed Don George in a bout for the title at the Garden a week from tomorrow night

"I didn't think McCready would get the title shot so soon," said Toots, "I would rather he didn't. I would like to see him engage in a few hard bouts first, but perhaps I'm a bit too cautious. A fellow as powerful as McCready and one who knows as much about wrestling has a chance to lick any man in the world.

"It's the same in all sports, isn't it? The rush of youth knocked off Ruth and Lou Gehrig, Tilden and Hagen were also forced back

"The old wrestling guard has passed on. The Zbyszko brothers, Doc Roller, Cyclone Burns and the rest of them all went down before Father Time. I held the old master off longer than the rest, but he finally caught up to me, too.

"George, of course, is still young and full of fire. He's only 29, which is young for a wrestler. But when he goes, McCready will be the one to lick him. Maybe in their coming bout, but within two years under any conditions."

"I want to drop in and see McCrea," I said to a passing scribe, he said. "Under your hat, Mr. Boston, I have been giving the boy private lessons."

Speaking of Skating

I STEAMED UP a red hot discussion when I revealed my inability to stage a skating comeback My latest letter on this subject was written by the capable Dan Cullen who has been successfully trying some of the major prima cases for Dist. Atty. Bill Foley's office. Dan writes as follows

"Dear Mr. Boston:

"I read with a great deal of interest your decision to drop all your efforts to stage a skating comeback after a trial. Let me advise you it isn't as hard to stage a comeback as you think.

"A year ago I staged my skating comeback after having been off the blades for 15 years, and while it took two months of hard work to get into shape, I finally succeeded in training down so that I can go for five minutes without puffing.

"Now I get on the ice at least twice a week, and I can assure you it is better than the 18 day diet for reducing. I know you will be interested in that.

"Don't give it up. Keep right at it, and in about two months I assure you you will be about as you were 20 years ago."

With those words of advice from Dan, I shall now go out to Jamaica Pond and see if I can break my neck as well as my knees. I must carry on

Holyoke Tunes in

PHIL GLASSMAN of 1397 Dwight street, Holyoke does not like all this talk about the boxing game having gone to the bowwows. I don't blame our Phillo as he lives in the one town in New England where boxing has prospered during the depression Homer Rainault's Arena has carded on gloriously. Take a peek at Phillo's letter. Here it is:

"Among others, Boston promoters of boxing are always squawking about something being wrong with boxing.

"How do they get that stuff? Why don't you tell them to come up to Holyoke and see a real boxing club—one that has been in operation for nearly nine years without a letter.

"Homer Rainault has the answer for critics of boxing. I read the Boston American every day and like your stuff. But, why not let the Boston Arena in on the country's most successful boxing promoter?

Have I done right by your letter, Phil? Sure, Rainault runs boxing show every week, furnishes first class attractions, draws large crowds and makes money. He should give the other promoters a few lessons.

AVOID CRAMPING TUNIS WARNS

By JOHN R. TUNIS

(Noted tennis writer now writing exclusively for Universal Service and Boston Evening American.)

New York, Jan. 31—Yesterday we discussed one of the principal faults of the average tennis player —cramping. This can be avoided by watching the ball carefully and getting away from it, which brings us to the second mistake of the duffer—not watching the ball.

The average player doesn't watch the ball. I will go further and say he doesn't watch it when playing his ball means. Fact is, the moment he sees a shot coming to him he panics.

WATCHING THE BALL

He loses his head. He begins to think where he will return it Then he thinks of his backhand or his opponent's court which he'd like to hit. Then he invariably lifts his head and looks toward that corner. Result: the ball lands in the bottom of the net.

Watch the ball. Yes, even after it bounces. If you don't the racquet is left to find it as best it can Sometimes it does, sometimes it doesn't. If the ball you are about to hit is not coming at you, fast, you ought to be able to watch it and use it spinning even after it has bounced. Try this. You'll be surprised. You'll see a surprising difference it will make in your game.

But, you tell me, I noticed Vines and Tilden always watch the ball. Or you may say, I saw a photograph of Cochet making a backhand stroke looking at a girl in the stands Certainly. Champions don't always watch the ball.

HELEN TELLS HOW

The rest of us must. Their familiarity with positional play, their genius, their reflexes enable to make certain movements at certain times, enables them to break rules. You and I cannot break rules. Keep your eye on the ball. Always and everlastingly.

Miss Helen Jacobs the three time woman's singles champion puts it this way. "I believe that good timing is achieved through the chief, unyielding rule of tennis, keep your eye on the ball.

KEADY QUITS WESTERN RESERVE POST

SAM WILLAMAN, EX-OHIO STATE, TAKES BERTH

Tom Keady of Melrose, for the past three years head coach of football at Western Reserve College in Cleveland today announced he was unable to accept a drastic slash in salary and the one-year contract tendered him for the 1934-1935 season, and therefore would terminate his affiliations with the mid-West college

Western Reserve, according to Keady, has been in a bad financial fix for several years. Bad weather last year made the situation further embarrassing

Prof C M Finfrock chairman of the athletic committee, offered Keady a one year contract on an all year basis at a greatly reduced salary

Keady, however, felt it inadvisable to move his family to Cleveland with the future so doubtful

"Western Reserve may have to abandon football," Keady states. "There is now a drive on among the alumni for funds to carry on the sport. The schedules for 1934 are completed."

Sam Willaman, recent football coach at Ohio State University and resident of Cleveland, has been named as Keady's successor. Willaman will be a member of the physical education department on an all-year basis.

Keady is known to be considered for several coaching positions in the East and expects to make an announcement on his future plans shortly.

Cleveland, Jan. 31 (INS)—Sam Willaman, who resigned as Ohio State University athletic director today, was formally appointed football coach at Western Reserve University today

Prof. C. M. Finfrock, chairman of the inter-collegiate committee of the school, announced that Willaman had accepted the offer and will assume his duties here March 1.

Reports were that Willaman will receive $10,000 a year for three years but must pay his assistant coaches from his own salary

Columbus, O., Jan 31 (INS) — Coach Sam Wilaman, sometimes referred to as "Sad Sam," today announced his resignation as head football coach at Ohio State University.

He has been under fire since the Michigan defeat this season despite the fact that his team won the seven other games on the Ohio State schedule

JOHN "MUGGSY" KELLY . . . schoolboy mound sensation at Cambridge Latin . . . throws and bats left-handed . . . pitched exhibition against Braves two years ago and gave only five hits while being beaten 2 to 0.

FRED NOSEWORTHY . . . former Malden High all-around athletic star . . . Played shortstop for Malden "Twi" team last season . . . Has done considerable catching . . . recommended by leading Greater Boston coaches.

The selection committee, you may judge from these sketches, did its job very well. With only letters to judge the ability of the more than 500 entrants, the odds were decidedly against half of the winners being outstanding performers. Yet each of the ten youngsters named, it develops, has class written all over him.

The Boston Evening American congratulates the committee.

And it tosses an orchid to Judge Fuchs for his generous co-operation in its campaign for a "new deal" for New England's junior athletes.

THRILLS IN SPORTS

Welfare Island Expose Brings Recollections Of Fighters in Stir • Some Had Hopes of Ring Careers—But Found Disillusionment

By Jack Kofoed

New York recently learned that Welfare Island was a hell hole except for strong arm lads, who promoted it for their own welfare. The probing finger of authority can doubtless stir around in other prisons, too, and find that conditions are none too savory

Reading the nauseating story made me think of Charley "Kid" Thomas. Fifteen years ago the Kid was a fair-to-middling lightweight fighter. He was rough and tough, and fought 'em all. Then, somehow or other, he became mixed up with John Law . . . and wound up in Philadelphia's Eastern Penitentiary. That was during the period when the prison was controlled by a crew called "The Four Horsemen" . . very similar, I suppose, to the governing body established by Joie Rao on Welfare Island.

It appears that Charley had trouble with the strongarms. What that trouble was I don't know . . and it doesn't matter for the purpose of this story. At any rate, he was seized in the prison yard one day. Vicious faced men went to work on him with razor-sharp knives. They gashed each cheek with scars . . . and shredded the ligaments in his arms until they became permanently paralyzed

KID McCOY

The last time I saw Charley "Kid" Thomas was at the Arena some years back. He had paid his debt to society, as the term in "stir" is sometimes laughingly called, and came out with a new suit, a five-dollar bill and useless arms to attempt the almost impossible task of earning a living. He had a rather sweet tenor voice, and on fight nights climbed into the ring and sang torch songs to the men who had once paid to see him fight. I don't know what has become of Thomas. Nobody mentions his name any more. He has passed out of the picture

Kid McCoy was another warrior who spent years behind the bars. He was one of the shrewdest, coldest, cleverest men who ever laced on a pair of leather puddings. What a man he was with the ladies, too! They shoved him into San Quentin for the alleged murder of his mistress during a drinking bout. The Kid always insisted that he loved the lady, and wouldn't knowingly have killed her . . . that, as a matter of fact, he had no recollection of the crime at all. Perhaps the jury partly believed him. At any rate, McCoy went up for second degree murder, and as I recall, was sentenced to some ten years. Of course, he, like Charley "Kid" Thomas was able to fight no more when given his release. Henry Ford, who became interested in the Old Warrior, gave him a job out in Dearborn . . . and there he is today, watching life roll past.

I can think of others, too. Vincent Lopez, the Mexican, who fought Tommy Loughran in Tom's first important windup, is doing a thiry-year stretch in the same prison where Charley Thomas was mutilated . . . and Joe Tiplitz who boasted what an iron man he was and went crazy from beatings around the head, wound up in an asylum for the criminally insane.

But there have been other fighters . . . unfortunate enough to fall afoul of the law, who dreamed that some day they might win back their ring laurels. Fifty years ago there was a heavyweight named, I think, Jimmy Elliott, who was sent to the hoosegow for a term of years. The whitewashed walls and the dim lights impaired his vision . . . but he was released through political pressure in order to fight another ace of the day named Johnny Dwyer. Of course, Elliott was unmercifully beaten. Later he was mrudered in a gang brawl and given one of the most ostentatious funerals engineered in the pre-Volstead days.

Blackburn Tried Comeback

Jack Blackburn was another who tried a comeback. This slim colored man was one of the greatest boxers that ever lived. In one show he fought Joe Gans at the lightweight limit and a few weeks later outpointed a 200-pound Chicago heavyweight named John Wille. But after Jack did his bit he had lost the stamina and keenness that a fighter must have.

I have mentioned none of these things to bring sorrow to the men mentioned. Both Blackburn and McCoy have paid for the unfortunate happenings that caught them in the toils. Ever since their release they have been law-abiding, industrious men . . . and each has made his living with the honest liking of those with whom he comes in contact.

But I'm leading up to another tragedy that concerns a boy named Herb Brandow. Herb fought around Philadelphia with fair success . . . but some little time ago was sentenced from seven to fifteen years for a holdup with a toy pistol. We wrote to Lou Jaffee from the Gratersford Prison . . . wrote of his ambitions for the future . . . and Lou told me about it.

Graterford is a model prison in the country, and Herb says he has plenty of chance for exercise. There are fellow prisoners who can box . . . and he trains and spars with them every day. There are seven years of incarceration ahead of him . . . and he is only twenty-two. He says that the holdup was the result of a bet, with really no criminal intent, but he'll take his punishment with a smile. In seven years Brandow hopes to build himself into a better fighter than he ever was before. Then . . . when he comes out . . . he will be ready to take up his career where he left it off.

It Would Be a Miracle

It will be a miracle, of course, if Herb Brandow, at twenty-nine, and with seven years of prison behind him, can accomplish what he hopes to do. There isn't one chance in a million that he can succeed. But it is important to him that he keep trying. After all, even the best of prisons and the most considerate of keepers can't make up for loss of liberty to a youngster who is full of life and health.

I hope Brandow keeps trying, though. The days will pass quicker. Hopeless depression of spirit won't drag him down into the quagmire. Perhaps the Pardon Board will watch him, and see that he is given another chance before he has served those seven years. There may not be much chance for an older man . . . but there is for him, particularly since the awful conditions of Welfare Island are not present at Gratersford.

But I do wonder what has happened to Charley Kid Thomas, who didn't have a chance when he walked out of the penitentiary.

FEW FOOTBALL CHANGES SEEN

New York, Jan. 31 (INS)—The football rules are slated to be hauled over the coals when the football coaches' rules committee meets here Saturday, but, according to Lou Little, Columbia University coach and chairman of the committee, radical changes are not likely to be countenanced, although they may be suggested

Among the suggested changes are

1—Permit forward passing from anywhere behind the scrimmage line.

2—Return the goal posts to the goal line

3—Abolish the dead ball rule

4—Increase the sideline zone from 10 to 15 yards

5—Abolish the rule barring a defensive player from running with a fumble

6—Permit a team on windy days to surrender the ball 25 yards down the field instead of punting, provided it is within its own 20-yard line.

NEWCOMERS IN 'ASHES' TILTS

Sydney, Australia, Jan. 31 (AP)—The 16 players who will represent Australia against England in the test cricket matches next summer were named today and includes several newcomers to "The Ashes" competition.

W. M. Woodfull again was named captain with Australia's premier batsman, Don Bradman, as vice-captain. Other members of the team are: W. Brown, A. Chipperfield, A. F. Kippax, S. J. McCabe, W. A. Oldfield, W. J. O'Reilly, E. H. Bromley, B. J. Barnett, L. S. Darling, H. Ebeling, L. O. Fleetwood-Smith, W. H. Ponsfield, C. V. Grimmett and T. W. Wall

The only surprise was the failure to select the veteran V. Y. Richardson. Another veteran, Harold Ironmonger, suffered an injury which put him out of competition

Bromley, Darling, Brown, Chipperfield, Barnett, Ebeling, O'Reilly and Fleetwood Smith, a left-handed or "goggly" bowler, will be making their first visit to England.

50 COURTMEN SEEK 5 BERTHS AT RINDGE

By BILL CONNELL

Mass production of basketball players proceeds merrily these bleak months at Rindge Technical School in Cambridge, as Coach Tommy Murphy parades his 50 court men through their daily drill

No skeleton squad for this coach who in five years' court teaching at Rindge has had four teams win coveted berths in the Tech tournaments. Murphy keeps some 10 teams working with at least one five composed of freshmen, another of sophomores and so on

From the four class group teams there are always some court men coming up to replace the graduates. And working the boys in team units it's easy to check absentees. Not that many boys dodge practice. It is too much fun.

KEEPS CLOSE CHECK

Murphy keeps a close check on his players' class work as well as attendance. Lazy students are prodded and mediocre students helped

Murphy's court system is varied. He likes man to man defense but shifts his players and plays according to the opposition. He is one of the keener students of sports among Greater Boston coaches, and Rindge teams are usually a jump ahead of others in progressive court tactics.

This season Rindge has trailed only the strong Chelsea five. While winning seven games. Newton was a victim at Rindge, and on Friday the pair meet again. This time at Newton. Then come Brookline, Chelsea, Somerville and Cambridge Latin. And, perhaps, the Tech tournament if Rindge maintains its fast pace.

10 VARSITY PLAYERS

Ten boys are ranked as varsity first team. They are Joe Watson center; Capt. Mel Byington, guard and forward; Vito Roback, guard; Walter Kishkis, center and guard with Frank Ruggeri, Eric Jackson and Frank Buttaro fighting for one forward job. George Ray guard; John Suckiel, center, and Joe Munroe, guard, complete the first group

The second team includes Mark Perry, center; John Preston and Thomas Hughes, forwards; John Gallagher and Fred Duffy, guards. Duffy is a nephew of Jim Duffy Jamaica Plain coach. Other second squad players are Walter Kaminsky, a center; Fred Lincewicz, guard; and Louis Pacheco and Joe McCarthy, forwards.

Positions named are likely to be shifted any game. For Coach Murphy braces his machine's weak corners with constant shuffling of the units. The system has been effective, this and other years. And, despite the strong competition ahead, it's a fairly good bet that Murphy will guide his charges back into the Tech classic again, this winter

M'COY PRIMED FOR AFFINITO

"Red" Affinito, New York University student, is a slight favorite to win over Al McCoy, who is now making his home in Dorchester, in their 10-round bout at the Boston Garden on Friday night. Affinito has won three bouts in a row in this city, and is of the opinion he carries too many guns for McCoy

Barney Fox is managing McCoy. He recently piloted Al to a knockout victory over Mickey Bishop in Maine and says he will also second him to a win over Affinito.

The six round bout between Johnny Rossi of Worcester and Hans Mueller is also expected to furnish plenty of action. Rossi is considered one of the best of the younger crop of middleweights.

The fours follow: Ralph Morgan vs. Louis Peters; in the semifinal, Henry Surrette meets Joe Uzvadanis; Joe Ricciotti clashes with Paul Stackpole and Arthur Cardinal tackles Nick Quatrone, all four rounders

Representatives of Mrs. William Randolph Hearst's milk fund for babies got the official okay on the welter title fight. Madison Square Garden is arranging for use of the ball park for the fight, which has the [illegible] Estimates of the gate run as high as $300,000.

Schmeling became convinced that Baer doesn't intend to meet him again in the near future, so he decided to go back to Europe after his fight with Steve Hamas in Philadelphia next month.

There are more than 500 teams entered throughout the country, and the New England entries are: Rhode Island State College, 2 teams, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 6 teams; Harvard, 1; Connecticut State College, 2; Norwich University, 1; University of Vermont, 1, Massachusetts State College, 1; New Bedford High, 2; University of New Hampshire, 2; Bangor High, 2, and University of Maine, 1.

AINTREE FIELD SLICED AGAIN

London, Jan. 31 (AP)—The field for the Grand National Steeplechase, to be run at Aintree March 23, was reduced to 54 today when 12 horses, including F. Ambrose Clark's American-owned Jack O'Day, were declared out

Previously the field had been reduced by the withdrawal of George H. (Pete) Bostwick's American jumper, Chenango, the 1931 winner; Grakle; Millionaire II; Swan O'Favon; Sir Dennis; Mighty Chance and Kilcashill, which died

The other jumpers declared out today are, Brienz, El Hadjar, Prince Mario, Gatebook, The White Rambler, Silver Grail, Shoreman, Shady Lake, Zag, Ottawa and Cinder Track

Fast Getaway the Cure

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Palm Beach, Jan. 31—Got down here for a night and then leave for Omaha. Make the same speech in both places and get out quick.

If politicians were smarter they would do the same thing. Give your talk and leave town before they realize what you have said.

Talking is so dangerous these days that the average Washington breakfast consists of a grapefruit and a denial.

He who runs may read. But he who runs faster can also speak. Along about 1936 both parties will have campaign orators who can talk convincingly over their shoulders

COONLEY FINDS CHEERFULNESS RUNS HIGH

Says Most Leaders Have Lost Doubts of Recovery

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor, Boston American

Howard Coonley, president of the Walworth Co., Inc., formerly president of the [illegible] has just returned from [illegible] of the Middle [illegible] and South. He found [illegible] running high and [illegible] had lost their [illegible] national recovery.

In a special message to this column, Mr. C[oonley] [illegible] today:

"In my trip I covered the larger centers in Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas. The improvement in sentiment since my previous trip of two months ago was remarkable. The doubt which had previously existed as to the success of the National Recovery program had largely disappeared and a big majority of the executives with whom I talked stated definitely that the administration's program was gradually taking constructive form and was bringing about a better stabilized market situation. Where codes had become effective, they were producing satisfactory results.

Howard Coonley

"In the Oklahoma and Texas oil country I encountered unusual optimism. After the early autumn slump, demand had turned upward in late October, and each month since has witnessed increasing activity. As inventories are low and the condition of equipment in the oil fields and refineries well below par, the oil supply distributors estimate a substantial improvement in purchases in 1934 over 1933. In the Detroit-Cleveland-Chicago districts, large orders for automobile parts are being placed, anticipating heavy business in moderate-priced cars."

Traders Looking for Long-Awaited Correction Period

BY WALL ST. SPECTATOR

Everything is still on the up and up in Wall Street. U. S. Steel's report wasn't so much, and payment of only 50 cents on the preferred may cause some disappointment. This, however, will probably be overlooked in the general enthusiasm around.

From here on more people will look for the long awaited technical correction.

The surprising thing is that few seem worried, and the Street is [illegible] that any setback here won't be serious.

TRAFFIC GAINS HELP RAILS

The rails are in line for some of their old-time stuff, according to [illegible] talk. The move by the R. F. C. to underwrite loans on a [long] term basis ends whatever worry there was about this year's maturities . . . The big thing, however, [is] that traffic is going up [illegible] which is very promising for earnings.

This new cold snap is a break for the coal industry and the coal carriers.

Merger talk about Lackawanna is being revived . . . DuPont's business this month is understood to be 24 per cent ahead of a year ago.

Good selling is supposed to be coming into the gold mining shares here.

Shares of the smaller steel companies are favorably regarded here. Youngstown Sheet & Tube is being accumulated, it is said. National Steel will show about $1.35 a share for last year.

Wheat Is Lower in Quiet Dealings

Chicago, Jan. 31—Material downturn of wheat values today resulted from lack of aggressive demand. Weakness of sterling together with easiness of securities at New York, had some bearish influence.

Opening at ⅜-⅞ decline, wheat afterward sagged further. Corn started ⅛-⅜ off, and subsequently held near the initial limits.

Postal Deficit Is Studied

By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE
Review of Reviews

This presents a record of Uncle Sam's outstanding long-time business enterprise. It covers the period from 1919-1933. As many have noted, with the exception of one year, 1919, there has been a continuous deficit each year. Naturally it has grown during the past four years. The increase in postal rates during the past year has had a definite and favorable effect upon the margin between receipts and expenditures.

Curiously enough, this is one field of enterprise which Adam Smith, the original rugged individualist, [illegible] could be entrusted to the government without any [illegible] regarding its successful management. This was due to the fact that the postal service involved nothing but routine performance entirely free from the need for discretion which appears in the conduct of every other form of business.

It is possible to take a government clerk, teach him what to do, and, provided he does that year in and year out, the business may be safely entrusted to his hands. In other words Adam Smith did not have any high regard for the intelligence and adaptability of Government [illegible].

In [view] of the fact that we have moved far and lately rather fast, from the [views] of Adam Smith, this one particular exception fails to justify itself. In all fairness to the government it must be said that this is not entirely due to any lack of business acumen or energy on the part of our postmasters and their assistants. Many of the services performed by the post office carry an open or concealed subsidy.

This applies particularly to the delivery of newspapers and periodicals and the encouragement of our merchant marine and aviation.

BOSTON STOCKS MOSTLY OFF

Share prices were mostly lower in late trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Some group staged recoveries, but fractional losses ruled in most cases. American Telephone and General Electric were down slightly. New England Telephone held fairly steady. Edison Electric converted an early fractional loss into a gain of better than a point.

New Haven, Pennsylvania and Atchison were down fractionally. Boston & Maine A stamped recovered an early loss of over a point. Eastern Gas & Fuel preferred was down two points, but reduced the loss later to a major fraction.

Pacific Mills held its ground in the textile group, advancing to a new high before meeting profit-taking.

SPRING RISE IS LIKELY, HANEY BELIEVES

Sees Chief Problem as Keeping Check on Inflation

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, Jan. 31—It begins to look very much as if we are to have a speculative spurt, rising prices, and increasing business activity before long now.

This condition should develop soon, and last well through the spring months.

At least, I cannot now see what is to stop it. In fact, the chief problem now seems to be how to check the potential inflation once it gets started.

The spurt now to be anticipated will be essentially inflationary, and the reasons for it are chiefly as follows:

(1) The huge excess reserves held by the commercial banks. As a result of past "open market operations" and the small demand for currency their excess reserves have piled up to the extent of nearly a billion dollars. These are available for loans, and the government will use its increased influence to make the banks loosen up.

Here we may mention the increased capital pumped into the banks by government subscriptions to their preferred stocks.

(2) The government, by the new money bill, has become a great central banking agency. It not only holds the nation's gold, but it has two billion dollars set aside with which it is authorized to buy gold and government securities. When it buys gold it increases the "metallic reserve." When it buys its bonds it piles up credit reserves in the commercial banks.

The government wants prices to rise (Gen. Johnson to the contrary), and it wants the banks to lend freely. And the President can now control the extension of what was formerly Reserve Bank credit.

(3) An attempt is about to be made to devalue the paper dollar to the level of a theoretical gold dollar, which has only 60 per cent as much gold as formerly. This will be a big job, because the dollar is now worth more than 60 cents on the gold basis.

It will require pumping out more credit dollars—enough to make them actually worth less in this country. That will occur only when prices rise.

What it means is "writing up" the nation's gold reserves, which is done (1) by making gold dollars smaller, and (2) by making many more paper dollars.

State St. Traders Expect Rails to Confirm Uptrend

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

State St. traders begin the period of anxious waiting that always accompanies a bull movement of any size. With the industrials in new high territory, as measured by closing prices, it is now a question of how soon the rails will come along and confirm the upswing. With some six points to go the carriers are likely to give the timid some worrisome moments. But the indications are they will also reach a new top closing.

As for new commitments at this point it would seem that they might be postponed until the dual averages have definitely given the all clear signal. After this takes place a reaction of fair proportions is altogether probable. Then the risks of a pyramid are lessened. Also the uncertainties of a struggling rise are avoided and costly mistakes are much less likely. We will not force ourselves.

EARNINGS ARE IMPROVED

Reports of leading industrial concerns coming to hand show that 1933, for all its early uncertainties, was a year of improved earnings. In some instances remarkable strides were made toward restoration of normal earning power. With a clear road ahead and money troubles largely straightened out, it is only natural to feel 1934 will show a continuance of the upward trend.

Notes: The 1933 about face in earnings heightens the impression given by recent markets that equities are worth holding . . . The old rule that many foreign investors cling to is that common shares should be bought in the second year of improving earnings . . . Thus are our ideas supported by the actual performance of industry.

The leader type of listed stocks have been doing somewhat better during recent sessions. But they still give the impression of being tired to some tape watchers. All in all, we would rather incline to our previous idea that 110-112 is a tough area and prices could easily react out of it in a surprising manner.

Sidelights: Utah Metals on the Boston board continues to hold its following . . . With stories about the F. H. Prince interest getting wide circulation this is not surprising.

ARE EMPLOYERS HELPING MAKE MORE JOBS?

Situations Talk in Effective Manner, Says Forbes

By B. C. FORBES

New York, Jan. 31—Jobs talk. Every time I see men clamoring around an employment agency or lined up by the score outside an establishment that has advertised for workers, I experience a thrill. I feel proud to be an American worker.

B. C. Forbes

All that Americans want is an opportunity to earn an honest living.

They don't want a dole, they don't want charity. They don't want Communism, they don't want revolution.

The rank-and-file are profoundly convinced, however, that they have not received a square deal from High Finance and Big Business. They feel emphatically that, by and large, financiers and capitalists who for years have been in the saddle have been over-mercenary, that they were unduly engrossed in feathering their own nests and that they did not have sufficient regard for the well-being of ordinary people.

This attitude is reflected clearly and bitterly in the thousands of letters which come to this column.

The people were ripe for a New Deal. They regard President Roosevelt as THEIR champion. They whole-heartedly applaud him for having taken the stand he has taken towards leaders of High Finance and Big Business. They cordially welcome the transferring of power from Wall Street to Washington. They are confid[ent] that President Roosevelt is animated by humane motives, that [he] is absolutely sincere in striving [to] bring about "the greatest good [to] the greatest number."

This writer, as a matter of fac[t], incurs vehement censure whe[n]ever he ventures to suggest th[at] some proposals emanating from Washington may not work out for the ultimate, permanent good of the country.

CLOSING TONE IN STOCKS IS IRREGULAR

New York, Jan. 31—The lively antics of past few boom-time sessions gave way to cautious contemplation in today's dealings on the New York Stock Exchange. The closing tone was irregular.

The fast-moving equities of the previous session showed resistance to the cahing-in process during the early hours, but some of these turned a little heavy later. At the same time, the volume of transactions dwindled appreciably on the declines.

Bonds were also subjected to moderate realizing. The dollar was firm in relation to sterling notwithstanding indications of further American gold pjurchases in London. Wheat lost about a cent a bushel, cotton was barely steady and other commodities a trifle hesitant.

Douglas Aircraft was a feature in the closing hour getting up around 4 points.

Several of the more active professionals showed a disposition to step aside until more developments in the gold program are announced. There were many conjectures in the financial district as to just how soon the President would make known his first dollar devaluation figure.

Stocks were irregular in the first hour. U. S. Steel and American Steel Foundry were easier while Inland Steel recorded a point gain.

Allied Chemical, American Smelting, Bohn Aluminum, du Pont, Electric Auto Lite and General Railway Signal were down a point or more. American Can, Auburn and American Commercial Alcohol were fractions to a point or more higher.

Sales at 11 a. m. approximated 870,000 shares.

Prices stiffened in the second period. Declines in the industrial and rail groups were largely wiped out. Utilities continued to hold their ground, and pushed forward moderately. Alcohol shares were active and inclined to work higher.

Aircraft issues were led by Douglas which advanced well over a point. Chrysler and National Distillers were slightly higher. Consolidated Gas advanced around a point.

Sales to noon approximated 1,360,000 shares.

The list turned downward in the third hour and losses of one or more points were general. Douglas Aircraft held its ground of more than a point above its last closing price. Bohn Aluminum was a soft spot, sagging more than five points. Issues down two or more included Allied Chemical, Case, Delaware & Hudson and U. S. Smelting.

Losses of a point or more appeared for American Smeltnig, U. S. Steel, International Business Machines, Commercial Solvents and Atchison. Bethlehem Steel was off over a point. Cudahy Packing was better than two points higher and Motor Products was up over a point.

Sales to 1 p. m. approximated 1,780,000.

Prices improved somewhat in the fourth hour. Douglas Aircraft was a feature of the period, advancing 4 points. Homestake Mining slipped back 10 points. Alcohol shares were given a whirl, with National Distillers getting up better than 2 points. American Commercial Alcohol showed a gain of over a point.

U. S. Steel, Case, Delaware & Hudson and Louisville & Nashville were down a point or more. American Rolling Mill was higher.

BAKED SLICED HAM WITH GLAZED APRICOTS

1 slice ham, 1 inch thick, 1¼ lbs.
1½ tsps. whole cloves
3 tbsps. brown sugar
2 cans canned or cooked dried apricot halves
1-16 tsp. mace
2 cups apricot juice
1-16 tsp. cloves

Sear the ham on both sides in a skillet. Then place it in a baking dish, stick the cloves around the edge of the ham and cover the top of it with the brown sugar, apricots and spices. Pour all the apricot juice over it. Bake in a hot oven, 400 deg. F., for 1½ hours, or until tender. Serves 4 to 6. Especially good when served with scalloped potatoes, which can be baked in the same 400 deg. oven for 1½ hours.

FIVE PRIZES OF ONE DOLLAR EACH

MRS. LUCILE FREDERICKS
77 Market st., Manchester, N. H.

PERSIMMON MERINGUE PIE

Press through a colander enough sweet ripe persimmons to make one pint of pulp free from seeds and skin. Add ⅓ cup of sugar mixed with the grated yellow rind of half a lemon, and ¼ tsp. ground mace. Heat to warming point. Add 2 tsps. of butter. Stir in beaten yolks of 2 eggs. Stir until these are set, but do not allow mixture to boil. Pour into baked pie shell. Cool, and cover with meringue made of the egg whites beaten until stiff, adding 2 tbsps. powdered sugar gradually, then ½ tbsp. lemon juice and ¼ tsp. vanilla.

KATHERINE E. MONAHAN

GERMAN BLUTWURST CANDY

Grate 3 cakes of German sweet chocolate. Mix in ½ lb. confectioner's sugar, place over hot water. When partly melted, stir in 2 whole unbeaten eggs. Beat well and continue beating over hot water until well blended. Then stir in ¼ lb. blanched almonds. When cool enough to work, mold into shape of a wurst, wrap in waxed paper. The following day it will slice well.

ALICE COCHRANE
114 London st., Lowell, Mass.

BURNT-SUGAR CAKE

Place ½ cup of sugar in a heavy skillet and allow it to melt and become a deep amber color, but not black. Add ¼ cup of hot water and let come to a boil. Remove and cool this burnt-sugar syrup while preparing the rest of the cake.

½ cup shortening
3 eggs
½ tsp. vanilla
1 cup cold milk
2½ cups cake flour
3 tsps. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
Burnt-sugar syrup

Cream the shortening and sugar together. Separate the eggs, add the beaten yolks and beat smooth. Add vanilla and burnt-sugar syrup, then the milk alternately with the flour, which has been sifted with the baking powder and salt. Mix well and fold in the egg whites beaten stiff. Place in 2 large or 3 small greased and floured layer cake pans and bake in a moderate oven (375 deg.) for about 25 minutes. Cool and ice with the following icing:

2 cups light brown sugar
½ cup cream
2 tbsps. butter
¼ tsp. vanilla

Mix sugar and cream and cook until a soft ball forms when a little is dropped in cold water. Remove from the fire, add the butter and completely cool before stirring. Add the vanilla and beat until ready to spread.

MRS. ANNETTE M. WENTWORTH
Kezar Falls, Me., R. F. D. No. 2

EGG FLIP

Heat a quart of freshly-drawn ale; meantime beat the yolks of four eggs to a cream with four tablespoonfuls of brown sugar, and the whites to a stiff froth. When the ale is scalding hot, pour it upon the yolks, stirring constantly. Then quickly whip in the whites until the flip is smooth, and serve it. If the ale is too hot, it will curdle or cook the eggs.

MRS. SAADA M. JACKSON
24 Appleton st., West Somerville, Mass.

CHOCOLATE PUDDING

2 eggs
1 cup sugar
¼ cup butter
1½ cups pastry flour
1 square unsweetened chocolate
1 tsp. vanilla
1½ tsps. baking powder
½ cup sweet milk
Pinch of salt

Cream butter with ½ the sugar. Beat egg yolks with remaining half of sugar. Combine the two mixtures. Add melted chocolate sweet milk, vanilla and the dry ingredients sifted together. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in angel cake tin 45 minutes, at 350 deg. Serve hot. Turn out on serving platter. Fill space in center with whipped cream, sweetened and flavored, and pour some of the Hot Chocolate Sauce over the top, putting the remainder of the chocolate sauce at the table to be passed around for extra sauce.

HOT CHOCOLATE SAUCE

Melt 1 square of unsweetened chocolate in double boiler. Add 1 tbsp. butter and 1 cup sugar and blend. Add ½ cup boiling water very gradually, stirring constantly. Let cook 3 minutes. Cool slightly and add the vanilla. Serve while warm.

NASH ADDS NEW EXECUTIVE

Courtney Johnson

Kenosha, Wis., Jan. 31—C. H. [illegible]iss, vice-president and director of sales of The Nash Motors Company, announced the appointment of Courtney Johnson, one of the automobile industry's outstanding sales executives, as sales manager for Nash and LaFayette cars with headquarters in Kenosha.

The appointment of Mr. Johnson is considered by Nash executives another important step in the organization of the 1934 Nash manufacturing and sales program which has brought more than 218 new dealers and many important new distributorships into the company's national sales organization since the recent presentation of the three record-breaking series of 1934 Nash twin-ignition cars.

The new Nash-built LaFayette's entrance into the lower price field provides Nash with a high quality car for every division of the automobile market.

FORD FORESEES TRUCK DEMAND

"Sales of commercial cars and trucks will be larger this year than in any year since 1929," predicts C. I. Haron, commercial division manager of the Ford Motor Company's Somerville branch.

He points out that sales of commercial vehicles showed a gain of 48 per cent in 1933, yet, of the trucks in use, 70 per cent are more than five years old, many of them being run beyond the point where they can be operated economically.

"That means a great replacement market, in which the new 1934 Ford V-8 delivery cars and trucks will, I believe, get a high proportion of the total business," he said.

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

America's Own History Proves the Dangers of Unpreparedness

ONE of the great needs of our time is a military history of the United States giving the unvarnished truth.

The uncensored photographs of the late World War, now appearing in the Sunday Hearst papers, tend to supply that want—slightly, all too slightly. That is one of the indirect purposes, however, of their reproduction.

We feel it our duty to bring home to the American people, if we can, a realizing sense of the tragic suffering of war and to impress upon them their vital interest in the prevention of war's recurrence, with its immeasurable woe to the generation which sustains the direct shock, and the almost equal suffering of the generations which come after and are obliged to absorb the cost of the actual struggle, and, with crippled energies, to restore the nation from its havoc.

Almost more harrowing than the scenes of the battlefields are the scenes in the back areas among the helpless civil populations. Non-combatants, and yet shot down at will—killed like sheep led to the slaughter. Driven from their homes, facing exposure to cold and storm without even the shelter of trenches or dugouts. Unprotected from enveloping attacks by poisonous gases, trudging the highways, with no destination. The fate of these hapless people, outnumbering the rosters of armies, is the crowning tragedy of war.

And the most cruel fact of war is that its whole trend is in the direction of an ever heavier impact upon the non-combatant populations of a belligerent country, rather than upon its armed forces, whose protection is not altogether ignored in the scientific view of modern war.

How can we avert these terrors? How can we save ourselves and our posterity from such calamities?

THE fearful thing is that these calamities have their source in ourselves—in our failure to learn from our experience, in our refusal to face the truth and to concern ourselves with it.

"AN EFFICIENT PREPARATION FOR WAR CAN ALONE SECURE PEACE."

These were the words of John Adams in his second message to Congress. They have been echoed times without number by every statesman in our history who loved his country and yearned for its peace and happiness.

THEY ARE THE WHOLE LESSON OF WAR. CAN WE LEARN IT? WILL WE LEARN IT?

We have spoken of the need of a military history of our country which shall tell the unvarnished truth.

Our historians have painted in glowing colors the successes of our former wars, but have suppressed with studied care the blunders which have characterized our military policy throughout the past.

Every war we have fought has been a sad history of waste and inefficiency. In the War of the Revolution, the American army used nearly three men to the enemy's one, and yet only two military events had a direct bearing upon the ultimate expulsion of the British—the capture of Burgoyne at Saratoga, and the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown, which was made possible by the assistance of a French army and a French fleet.

The War of 1812, in which the British occupied Washington, burned many public buildings, and forced the President and his officials to flee the capital, was an appalling record of losses and failure. Chaos reigned everywhere.

From the standpoint of our national pride it was redeemed by Jackson's victory at New Orleans with his Tennessee riflemen, but by a singular irony this battle was won only after peace had been concluded. It was an epilogue to the war, rather than an element in its outcome.

An "unvarnished" history of our Indian wars, of the Mexican War, of the Civil War, of the Spanish War, would tell the same story of belated and panicky energy, wasteful and ineffective effort, and ruinous and inexcusable losses.

AS TO the World War, from which, despite the years that have elapsed since the Armistice, we are hardly yet emerged, its cost runs into uncomputable billions. It is not possible yet for us to reckon with any approach to finality or accuracy what its cost to the nation will prove to be.

Congress should have no hesitancy in making outlays which would secure us against war's approach and which are of pigmy size compared to the ultimate cost of the war they would be sufficient to avert.

Our people seem determined to forget the unnecessary cost, both in blood and treasure, of our past wars, and to remember only that somehow or other we have emerged from them successfully.

As the late Gen. Leonard Wood said in appealing to his countrymen for military preparedness:

"Ignorance concerning our military history is universal and profound. The lesson of all war history is the necessity of thorough preparation."

He calls attention to the fact that improvements in transportation have enormously reduced the period of an enemy's approach and that everything operates in favor of the prepared nation, while the unprepared pacific nation has an increasingly reduced chance of successful resistance.

He reminds us of something which in our vainglory and boastfulness we are apt to forget, and that is that WE HAVE NEVER YET WAGED WAR SINGLE-HANDED WITH A FIRST-CLASS NATION PREPARED FOR WAR.

"Our people," says he, "know nothing about what such a struggle means. They have no conception of the effect of the application of a well-organized and thoroughly prepared military force."

FELLOW CITIZENS! Will you not heed such words of earnest warning? It cannot be that as a people we are so light of mind as to be content with a fictitious security, flattering ourselves that because we have escaped destruction in the past, we may banish apprehension as to the future.

Remember—remember always, and never forget—"AN EFFICIENT PREPARATION FOR WAR CAN ALONE SECURE PEACE."

And translate this truth into action—effective action—and a genuine and lasting security and peace!

In next Sunday's Advertiser will again appear five pages of UNCENSORED war pictures, still further impressing the lesson we must heed:

"Keep foreign wars out of America—and keep America out of foreign wars!"

Waiting Their Turn So terrific were casualties among untrained British troops in one of their great drives that thousands had to be cared for in open-air dressing stations just behind the trenches. (Int. News Photos.)

Next Sunday's Boston Advertiser will again publish FIVE PAGES of UNCENSORED pictures showing why America must be prepared. KEEP OUR COUNTRY OUT OF FOREIGN WARS AND KEEP FOREIGN WARS OUT OF THIS COUNTRY.

O. O. McIntyre -:-

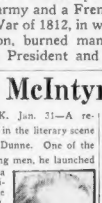
NEW YORK, Jan. 31—A remarkable figure in the literary scene is Finley Peter Dunne. One of the wealthiest writing men, he launched his career as a reporter in Chicago during the era when Ade, John McCutcheon and Eugene Field were riding top-gallant. And he followed them into magazines and books.



O. O. McIntyre

His homespun philosophy, written around the mythical Mr. Dooley, left a permanent impress on literature. He is widely quoted among nestors of the political clubs even today. In younger years Dunne was a bon vivant who could down a quart of champagne without batting an eye.

Today he is ruddy cheeked and brimming with vitality. One of his early companions was the globe-trotting Bob Collier, and Dunne circled the globe with him several times. Of all men in literary trade, he had the greatest capacity for forming friendships with men of wealth.

Another of his cronies was Harry Payne Whitney, and both Collier and Whitney left Dooley's creator substantial sums in their wills. Thus by violating many success rules laid down by the Orison Swett Mardens he reaches the usual "benefit" period in a sunsetty glow of health, wealth and fame.

It has been several months since I've idled around my favorite loafing spot—the Information Desk at Grand Central. Of employes meeting the public, attendants there seem best of all risers to the occasion. Targets for an incessant barrage of questions that would confuse the average, they are always serene and unruffled. A bewildered old lady wanted to know how to get a dead ear phone recharged and a tweedy sprout with golf clubs inquired if the club car sold a certain brand of table water. Thus it thused for 20 minutes. Also a fellow rushed up who fluttered in flutey uptakes exactly like Ed Wynn.

There's an embering glow, for the sartorially minded, in the catacomb of per. British haberdashery shops in Radio City. Their "clarks" have manners reminiscent of Burington Arcade. The necktie is the cravat; the vest, the westkit, and suspenders, braces. There are gloves by the glovemaker to H. R. H. and much display of stocks in revival again. Nobody ever looked so dandy in a stock as William Faversham, by the way.

One of the whoops boys was confiding his ambition to Paul Whiteman the other evening. All his life he had wanted, as a female impersonator, to swoop down a theater runway trailed by 20 yards of gold lace!

At the month ago opening of the Ziegfeld Follies, now bequeathed to the Shuberts and housed in their Winter Garden, I saw sitting alone far back a gentle soul the public rarely sees but who, as Ziegfeld's handyman, had much to do with the success of revues. He is Percy Thomas, who seemed wrapped in the bliss of passive meditation. I wondered if he might not be thinking of other days, other faces—Bert Williams, Jimmy Hussey, Jack Donohue, Johnnie Dooley, Bert Savoy, Raymond Hitchcock, Anna Held, Olive Thomas, Martha Mansfield, Ed Gallagher and Helen Walsh.

New York's first night audiences attempt to attain smartness by hiding enthusiasm. This, plus the critics' custom to display restraint, gives the premiere a chill that cannot be overcome by the usual claque. Often when there should be a loud outburst there is a ripple. Acting is tough enough these days without the audience exploiting professional solemnity.

Oddly enough, this lethargy is not pronounced at receptions to foreign stars—especially British importations. The most extravagant first night outbursts have been for Noel Coward, Mrs. Pat Campbell, Beatrice Lillie and Gertrude Lawrence. They can hardly speak their lines for cheering and huzzas of "Bravos." Commendable, to be sure, but always am I tweaked by the outrageous razzing the only American on a vaudeville bill at the Palladium in London received the summer of 1926. He was an excellent performer. His sole dereliction was an American accent.

So flushed with indignation was I at this studied insolence that I barged smack through the fog to the Savoy and, following the British formula in anger, wrote a scorching letter to the Times. It was a pip, if I do say. Beginning in soft and silky metronome and working up to a skyrocket finish, I let the manners of perfidious old Albion have both barrels, blooey, blooey! Months later my wife, to whom it was given to mail, handed it to me. I'm not even allowed to get mad at our house.

New York Day by Day

The Human Side of the News; Shrine to McGuffey

By Edwin C. Hill

That sentimental streak in Henry Ford—the link which binds him to his boyhood on a Michigan farm, to ice-skating, square-dancing, old furniture and the things of the good old days—crops out again in the news. For Mr. Ford has taken an option on a rambling farmhouse which has stood outside of Washington, Pennsylvania, since Revolutionary days. And if, as expected, he exercises this option, the old farmhouse will be restored and the country will have a shrine to one of its most deserving sons—to one, indeed, who more greatly influence the minds and character of millions of boys and girls than probably any other American teacher.

For William Holmes McGuffey, who was born in the old farmhouse, was none other than the McGuffey who gave to America the book which influenced its development more than any other book ever published, except the Bible. We say book, but like the Scriptures themselves, it was really a series of books—the McGuffey Eclectic Readers, six of them.

To Henry Ford and to millions of his fellow-Americans, including myself, the word McGuffey is a magic sesame which opens the floodgates of memory. It brings back the little red schoolhouse on the hill. It conjures up spring and violets by the wayside, barefoot boys and pig-tailed little girls, the old road and the 9 o'clock bell.

I have no doubt that a hundred million American boys and girls, between the years 1836 and 1906 first drank at the well of knowledge sunk by William Holmes McGuffey out in Oxford, Ohio, almost a century ago.

The man, McGuffey, is far less known than his famous readers, from which so many men and women, famous or obscure, good and bad, and rich and poor, first learned the delights of reading. His people were Scotch and his father, Alexander McGuffey, was one of the best of the Indian scouts in the early Northwest Territory. From his father and mother he learned the three R's, but it was an itinerant preacher, a circuit rider, who detected young McGuffey's urge for learning, and put him through college.

WISDOM CONDENSED

From college and the Presbyterian ministry William Holmes McGuffey went out to publish McGuffey's First Reader. The wisdom of the world was condensed in its seventy-four pages, with illustrations wonderful to young eyes. The alphabet first, then simple words: A-X spells ax, and the picture alongside to prove it. B-O-X for box, and another picture. The drawing of the dunce and the admonition: "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." The sad, sad story of Frank Brown, who played hookey and was drowned. All were there, with hundreds of others. And no matter how our elders spoke it, we youngsters in Indiana were cautioned to pronounce C-O-V-E-R-E-D as covered, and not kivvered, and O-I-L as oil and not ile.

Reader after reader followed McGuffey's old first, as childhood minds were shaped to receive the growing knowledge—McGuffey's Second Reader, his Third, Fourth, Fifth and finally the wonderful Sixth. Obedience, piety, kindness, temperance! Surely it was not Mr. McGuffey's fault if we failed to acquire those virtues or to hold them. It was he who first showed to us Patrick Henry before the Virginia Assembly, taunting George the Third and crying out: "Give me liberty or give me death!"

Homespun religion, patriotism and homilies were to be found in plenty, but also the best in poetry, rhetoric and literature. Many a man went to Congress, and more than a few to the White House, because of the spark kindled within them by the words of great men which McGuffey put in his readers as examples and inspiration.

Well, times change, as Cicero said. McGuffey went out of style just about the time that Henry Ford's horseless carriage came in.

Education for children seems to have discarded much of the old-fashioned and the simple. Pedagogy is as standardized as a motor car assembly line in one of Mr. Ford's own factories.

We who knew the great McGuffey and drank of the golden fountain have only sympathy for the youngsters who knew him not, nor his well of knowledge. How in their mellow years will they be able to say as fervently as we say tonight: "How dear to our hearts are the scenes of our childhood"?

POETRY TO HELP US

It is a pleasant thing to record that a gentleman with a great gift for the right word in prose and poetry, and in the ordinary business of living, has come in excellent health to the age of 81. I refer to Dr. Robert Underwood Johnson, whose tranquil genius has added so much to the luster of American civilization. He has written many books of verse, and some years ago he was our ambassador to Italy. He is also director of the Hall of Fame of New York University.

Entering his 82d year, Dr. Johnson tells us that American life needs imagination, more than anything else—something to offset the materialism which finally brought on the hard times from which we are just emerging. And the way to acquire imagination is to read the best poetry.

He himself has written a new poem as a tribute to President Roosevelt, calling it "The Conqueror of Delay"—a salute to a President who goes to work and does it. He has another poem called "Recognition," which he wrote before our government recognized the Soviet government of Russia.

Dr. Johnson, like all good Americans, bows to the President's will and action in the Russian matter, but he says very frankly that the Soviets for years have been engaged in undermining our institutions, and that they must constantly be watched against the spread of Communistic propaganda by people who are subtle and never keep faith.
